China Reds Pour 13 Miles Behind American Lines; U. S. Charges Aggression; Truman Calls In Aides; Will Ask Billion More for Atom Bomb Production

Tract of 250,000 Acres Selected In South Carolina For New Plant

By Frank Carey
Associated Press Science Writer

A huge program costing more than $1,500,000,000, to develop the H-bomb and to step up production of the atom bomb was outlined yesterday.

The Atomic Energy Commission picked a 250,000-acre tract in South Carolina for development work on the H-bomb.

At the same time, congressional sources said they expected President Truman to ask soon, possibly today, for funds for a vast expansion of atomic energy and electrical power production in the Tennessee Valley. There were indications this expansion would cost close to one billion dollars.

The South Carolina project will cost 260 million dollars, with a possibility of more funds to come. If fully successful, it will give this country by far the deadliest weapon in history.

AEC Chairman Gordon Dean told Congress in asking for the money last July that the commission would build facilities "which can either make materials for A-bombs, H-bombs or fissionable material for use in power reactors."

Following the announcement that the site had been selected, Representative Gore (D., Tenn.) said he expected President Truman to ask for much larger sums to build plants which would produce the A-bomb material, uranium-235.

"I anticipate the new construction will be done within the Tennessee Valley Authority distribution territory," Gore told reporters. "This will require additional very large TVA generating facilities—probably several more steam plants."

Gore said the House Appropriations subcommittee that handles such requests will hold a special meeting this morning.

The site, which may be the birthplace of the world's most destructive weapon, is in Aiken and Barnwell Counties, South Carolina, near the Savannah River. The location was chosen over 100 other sites.

Construction of several big plants there will start early in 1951.

If the H-bomb is perfected, its destructive power would be limited only by the amount of hydrogen materials its makers could economically and practically in-

Binaggio Planned To Invest in Firm Truman Kin Ran

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Kansas City Star said today that Charles Binaggio, Kansas City political boss, was preparing to invest $200,000 in a pumice company operated by D. F. Wallace, brother-in-law of President Truman, at the time Binaggio was slain last April.

Wallace denied Binaggio approached him.

The story said the company was formed in 1949 by Dennis Chavez, jr., son of Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.), and Blevins Davis, theatrical producer and friend of President Truman, and that it had obtained a $50,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The company obtained a large armed forces' contract for building blocks which later was canceled because the concern stood to lose $50,000 on the deal, the Star continued.

Peiping Assailed in U. N.

Chinese Reds Refuse to Halt Flow of 'Volunteers' to Korea

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 28 (AP).—The United States today charged the Russian-backed Chinese Communists with "open and notorious" aggression in Korea. Red China replied that those Chinese Communists in Korea are volunteers and that Peiping will not stop their departure for the battlefront.

American delegates Warren R. Austin used the term "aggression" in the Security Council on instructions from Washington after General MacArthur reported there are 200,000 Chinese Communist soldiers in Korea and "we face an entirely new war."

Poker-faced Wu Hsiu-chuan, chief Chinese Communist spokesman at the U. N., said in his first speech to the Council that the security of his country is endangered by United States aggression against Korea and that his country is alarmed by the spread toward China of the "flames" of the United States "war of aggression."

Wu counter-charged that the United States is guilty of "cunning" aggression also against China, Viet Nam, the Philippines and other Asian countries. He demanded the Council condemn the United States and slap strong sanctions on the Washington Government. He also called for expulsion from the U. N. of Nationalist China.

The Council adjourned until 3 p. m. Wednesday without further action, but Western delegates gloomily said that instead of showing any sign of conciliation the Chinese Communists had outdone the Russians in blasting the United States.

They said Wu had created the worst possible impression in his first speech and had done much to draw closer together those members of the Security Council supporting the U. N. action in Korea.

Austin said in a statement after the meeting:

"The Chinese Communist spokesman revealed that his ap-

Red Sabotage Guide Found By Seaman in 'Sardine' Cans

By Fendall Yerxa and Ogden R. Reid
(Copyright by N. Y. Herald Tribune News Syndicate)

A merchant seaman's hunger aroused by an innocent looking sardine can recently brought to light insidious Communist plans for subversion, violence and revolution.

An American ship moored at a Philadelphia dock was making ready for sea. Crewmen worked to dispose of spoiled canned goods in the hold. They dumped case after case of tinned "food" into the harbor unaware that they were sinking evidence of a Communist conspiracy.

Fortunately one of the sailors decided to find out whether some of the fish might not still be edible. With the blade of his penknife, he cut into the lid of a tin, which he observed was soldered in a peculiar fashion. Inside the can nestled sixty-three tiny pamphlets. They were printed in Spanish, published in 1946 and 1947.

The first one bore on its cover the innocuous title, "Reglamento Official del juego de Futbol"—"Official Regulations of the Game of Football." But at the top of the first page, in capital letters, was a chapter summary. "Sabatajes a lineas electricas de baja alta tension." There was nothing about "futbol."

Instead the miniature pamphlet concerned itself with instructions on sabotage—"sabotage to low and high tension electrical lines; places of most practical effect. Transformers; most sensitive places; central electrical headquarters; waterfalls, dikes, sluices and pipes."

The seaman, who could not read Spanish, took one of the cans merely as a souvenir. Out of curiosity he left the remainder in two crates on a table to see who would claim them. But his surveillance was imperfect, and they subsequently disappeared somewhere within the United States.

Later, a United States Merchant Marine cadet aboard the ship came into possession of the souvenir can and its contents. He turned it

Paris Cabinet Near Fall on Report Leak

Resignation Refused By President; Move to Impeach Moch Fails

PARIS, Nov. 28 (AP).—The French Cabinet teetered tonight, caught in a struggle between international duty and internal politics.

Premier Rene Pleven and his ministers decided to resign after the National Assembly voted disapproval of Defense Minister Jules Moch.

Pleven submitted the resignation to President Vincent Auriol, but the President refused to accept it because of the tense international situation.

Pleven then went back to try to persuade the ministers to remain in office.

The Assembly had balloted secretly on a motion of impeachment, which would have sent Moch, a Socialist, before a special high court for trial for his part in "the affair of the generals"—leakage of a special report on the Indo-China war.

The vote was 235 to 203 against, with 37 abstentions.

The affirmative vote was a slap at Moch, but failed to reach the constitutional majority of 286 necessary for impeachment.

Pleven's Cabinet is made up of three main groups—the Socialists,

Doctor's Daughter, 6, Is Killed By School Bus in Silver Spring

The 6-year-old daughter of a Kensington, Md., physician was crushed to death yesterday afternoon under a wheel of her school bus.

The victim, Nancy Jeanne Allen, daughter of Dr. Samuel Allen of 18 Fawcett st., Kensington, died instantly when the rear wheel of the backing bus ran over her head after knocking her down at the driveway entrance to the playground of St. John's parochial school, in Silver Spring, Md.

Police said that buses, hired to carry the pupils to and from the school, regularly use the entrance as a turn-around for Woodland rd., a paved street which dead-ends just past the playground entrance.

A teacher, Sister Mary Paradeta, told police she was shepherding a group of school children to the bus pick-up point when the accident occurred. Nancy, a member of the group, lagged behind and then ran to catch up to

Acheson Advises Congress of Grave New Turn; Aim Of Foe in Doubt

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The gravest day of the Korean war brought Washington one answer and two questions.

Chinese Communists, 200,000 strong, pouring across the Yalu River answered the questions of whether or not the Chinese Communist regime was officially involved in direct aggression. State Department spokesmen, for the first time, did not hesitate to say so.

The questions were even graver than the events. The first one is "Why did they do it?"; the second, "Is this the start of World War III?"

In the State Department, from which Secretary Acheson took the news of the foreboding events to two Congressional committees, and in the National Security Council, assembled at the White House in a special meeting, officials did not hide their fear that the events could lead to World War III.

High officials, privately interviewed, were without exception unanimously uncertain on the key question: Whether the act of sending hundreds of thousands of Chinese troops into battle meant that China was ready to risk and accept general war, or whether it was merely effecting a situation of strength from which to bargain.

But those officials were, with equal unanimity, quite certain on several other points:

The Chinese were, indeed, in a situation of great strength.

Whatever their goal and objective, they acted in accordance, with a Kremlin-conceived plan.

They would not have acted without very firm commitments from Russia for backing them up, in accordance with the results of their action.

Hitherto, at least in public pronouncements, the Administration has not specifically ascribed the presence of Chinese troops in North Korea to official action by the Chinese Government.

But soon after the issuance of General MacArthur's communique yesterday morning, State Department press spokesman Michael J. McDermott said:

"This is aggression by the Communist China regime."

A half-hour before McDermott spoke, Acheson was before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in a closed session.

His appearance had been planned almost as a routine event—a normal briefing to the committee on what had transpired in foreign affairs since the Congress adjourned. A statement for the press on the subject matter of his meeting had even been drafted the day before.

Although Acheson did, indeed, cover the world waterfront of Communist aggression for the committee, it was obvious that

Ominous Talk Appears To Doom Negotiations; U. N. Stand Stiffened

By Ferdinand Kuhn

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 28—Until Communist China began to speak in the Security Council this afternoon, the 53-nation coalition that backed the use of force in Korea had shown every sign of cracking wide apart.

Two hours later, when Wu Hsiu-chuan of Peiping had finished his high-pitched barking of a 9000-word harangue, the U. N. had stiffened its collective backbone.

Many who thought the U. N. could negotiate with Peiping, or at least with this delegation, believed it no longer. Many who thought Communist China should be seated in the U. N. had changed their minds.

Those who turned pale at the very thought of a U. N. war with China still hated it and feared it, especially those Europeans who had been terrified at seeing American military power sucked away from Europe into the morass of Asia.

But Europeans who had wished for conciliation, and worked for it, felt as if blinkers had been ripped from their eyes. This was especially true of the French, who were angry because the Peiping spokesman had linked Indo-China with Korea.

By common consent among non-Soviet delegates and officials here, Andrei Vishinsky never made a

Truman Sees Security Council, Military, Intelligence Chiefs

President Truman called an extraordinary conference of his top advisers yesterday to consider the grave turn of events in Korea. They included members of the National Security Council and armed services and intelligence chiefs.

He later had Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, give his Cabinet a briefing on the military situation created by the onslaught of Chinese Reds against Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces.

The deepest secrecy surrounded all that went on in the White House Cabinet Room.

Attorney General McGrath, on his way out, said that the President had "discussed the world situation in general, and Korea in particular."

Vice President Barkley told reporters that he was "not the talking member of the firm," and added that there wasn't anything he could say about the situation.

Mr. Truman met with the Security Council at 3 o'clock. This is made up of himself, Barkley, Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Marshall, W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and James Lay, jr., executive director of the Security Council.

Also called into this meeting were Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, W. Avarell Harriman, Special Assistant to the President; Sidney W. Souers, consultant to the President; Undersecretary of Defense Lovett, Secretary of the Army Pace, Secretary of Air Finletter, and Undersecretary of the Navy Kimball.

Others were General Bradley, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army; Admiral Forrest Sherman, chief of naval operations; Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force; Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, director of the Central Intelligence Agency; Ambassador-at-Large Philip Jessup, Deputy Undersecretary of State Freeman Matthews, Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs Dean Rusk, and Paul Nitze, of the State Department's Policy Planning Board.

Allies Believed Able to Hold at Korea's Waist

Estimate Is Based On U. S. Superiority In Air and on Sea

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

High Pentagon officials declared yesterday that United Nations troops probably can hold a defensive line across the narrow waist of North Korea.

This estimate of the "very serious" situation in the Far East is based on the fact that General MacArthur's badly outnumbered forces have command of the air and sea and much superior fire power on land.

It is conditioned on: (1) American divisions and other U. N. units not already decimated getting out of the present threatened entrapment without too heavy losses; and (2) Russia not throwing in large aerial and naval forces to challenge our present sea-air supremacy.

These top defense chiefs, however, still are convinced that the USSR does not want a world-wide war. They believe the Kremlin's aim is to involve us in a long, strength-sapping war with China, while building up their own military strength.

America's atomic stockpile and strategic bombers still provide the great deterrant against avowed Russian entrance into the conflict, many top Pentagon men hold.

Officials hope MacArthur's

Crisis in Korea Sidetracks Political Maneuvers on 'Hill'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The grave turn of the war in Korea yesterday clamped at least a momentary damper on Capitol politicking and apparently altered the hitherto bleak short session legislative outlook.

Republicans most critical of the Truman program talked of holding Congress in session through the Christmas holidays to deal with "emergency" measures.

While there was no formal closing of party-line ranks, Senate GOP Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) offered to "cooperate with th President in taking whatever action may be necessary to meet the war crisis."

Wherry Stresses Unity

Said Wherry:

"The situation in Korea is critical and compels unity of all leaders in our Government in making vital decisions of policy that must be made."

A developing filibuster still threatened the Alaskan statehood bill, No. 1 Truman measure in the Senate, but the war's turn plainly brightened the prospects of these four other major administration measures:

Multi-billion defense appropriations, emergency aid to Yugoslavia, a four-billion-dollar excess profits tax bill, and extension of Federal rent controls.

Republican and Democratic steering committees, called together to set party policy on major legislative proposals, talked mainly about the war instead and fixed ironclad policies on nothing.

The House was not in session, but in the lobbies off the floor Senators and Representatives talked of little but the war's turn. A few voices were raised in favor of last-resort use of the atom bomb.

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) said Gen. Douglas MacArthur should be allowed to use the bomb at his discretion.

"We used the A-bomb against the Japs with salutary effect," said Brewster. "I see no reason we shouldn't use it against the Chinese Communists."

Two members of the House Armed Services Committee, Representatives L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.) and W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) also suggested use of the bomb.

But another member, Representative Jack Z. Anderson (R., Calif.) said it would be "the worst thing we could do."

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) in a Senate speech demanded that MacArthur be given immediate authority to send bombers across the border into Manchuria to destroy the Chinese Communist supply line.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said he thought the country would favor "direct action against

Worst Drop Since War's Start

Stock Losses Range to $4 Under Heavy Selling Flood

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP).—A staggering setback in the stock market today was brought on by the grave international crisis in Korea.

Losses were the greatest since the early days of American defeats at the hands of advancing North Korean troops late in June at the outset of Korean fighting.

Losses ran from $1 to $4 a share and higher throughout the entire list.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell $2.50 to $83.20.

General MacArthur's statement that we face "an entire new war" started brokers' wires humming with selling orders before the stock market opened for business.

There was a log jam during the first 30 minutes of trading that put the ticker tape as much as two minutes behind floor transactions. It ran clear within 20 minutes.

Large blocks of pivotal issues were traded at agreed-on opening prices, and the whole list started a downward movement that lasted through the first hour. Thereafter a few leaders tried to rally among the steels, motors and chemicals, but they couldn't make the grade.

Selling was resumed a little after the half-way point of the day and never seriously let up. Some issues rebounded from their lows toward the close, but there were enough others moving into new low ground to bring the list as a whole down.

The volume of trading came to 2,970,000 shares, as against 1,740,000 shares Monday. The total was close to the largest of the year.

The desire to sell today was nudged along by statements from Washington officials that we would have to spend more and tax more and borrow more and run up bigger deficits.

The market almost completely ignored good news developments that in other times probably would have touched off a wave of buying. Railroads continued their reports of remarkable recoveries, and there was a flood of dividends in

Enemy Smashes Flank; 'New War' Seen Under Way; 270,000 in Attack

TOKYO (Wednesday), Nov. 29 (AP).—Chinese Reds swung 13 miles in behind American positions in northwest Korea today through the crushed east flank of the 75-mile United Nations front.

American reinforcements and tanks rushed up to meet the flank menace while U. N. forces in the west and center of the line made an orderly withdrawal up to 10 miles southward toward the Chongchon River.

The withdrawing forces yielded Yongbyon and Yongsan on the northwest side of the river and Won on the east bank, all formerly strategic anchors in the Allied line.

The critical situation, posed by 200,000 Chinese Reds and 70,000 North Koreans, amounted to "an entirely new war," General MacArthur said in a special communique. He promptly summoned his two top generals in Korea to Tokyo for an emergency conference. It lasted four hours.

From Red-captured Tokchon, at the east end of the front, the onrushing Communists rolled 23 miles southeast to the town of Samso. It is 13 air miles south of Won on the Chongchon River.

Yanks In New Positions

Withdrawing United States Infantrymen have taken up new positions just north of Won.

At Samso, the Reds are less than 5 miles from a railroad leading up from the big U. N. supply base at Sunchon, 11 miles to the south.

MacArthur's 110,000-man U. N. Army in northwest Korea, which had launched an end-the-war offensive last Friday, fell back before the onslaughts of 14 Chinese divisions and elements of seven North Korean divisions.

Seven more Chinese divisions were in action in northeast Korea, barring a move by United States Marines to strike west and cut supply lines behind the Red counteroffensive in the northwest.

The battle at Samso developed after the Communists ambushed a plotoon of the United States First Cavalry division.

First Cavalry reinforcements moved up to battle with a Chinese regiment and inflicted from 500 to 600 casualties.

A United States Eighth Army spokesman said American tanks have moved into the continuing fight against the Chinese, who still were throwing massed infantry forward despite huge losses.

The spokesman said withdrawals at the west and center of the front were orderly despite heavy enemy pressure. But he acknowledged

'Home for Xmas' Promise Denied By MacArthur

Ray Henle, editor-in-chief of the Sun Oil Company's Three-Star Extra, last night said on his news program over NBC that the now famous "the boys will be home from Korea by Christmas" statement by General MacArthur was an incorrect interpretation of the facts.

In response to a cable from Henle, General MacArthur in a cabled reply sent by way of the Pentagon said: "In reply to question contained in your cable of November 28 apparently greatly exaggerated statements have been attributed to some informal comments passed between my field commanders and myself in a jocular vein expressive of the universal hope for an early termination of hostilities. The evident physical impossibility of fulfillment of the statement attributed to me should be its own best refutation. At no time have I ever attempted to predict the course or termination of this or any other military campaign.

(Signed) "MacArthur."

Defense Chiefs Plan To Double Air Power

Stepped-up Air Force plans now call for doubling the number of strategic bombing and air defense groups in service prior to Korea, top Pentagon officials said yesterday.

The revamped program provides for 65 such groups within the next couple of years, plus an as yet undecided total of tactical air and transport groups, it was disclosed.

These new expansion plans would be launched by funds carried in the Second Supplemental Defense Budget now being readied for Congress. They are not the result of the critical new situation in Korea.

Under the old 48-group program, there were 15 heavy and medium bomber groups in the Strategic Air Command, and 20 fighter groups which had to double in brass both for air defense, bomber escort, and tactical air.

While the new program of 65 strategic and air defense groups is fairly firm—subject to radical revision if the present crisis develops into a major war in China—there are no decisions as yet on the ultimate planned number of transport and tactical air groups. The latter is largely dependent on incomplete plans for the defense of Western Europe.

It was disclosed last summer during hearings on the First Supplemental Defense Bill that the Air Force planned to expand to 58 groups by next June and to 69 within the next two or three years. Since then, four groups of the Air National Guard have been mobilized.

The Second Supplement budget is expected to provide for well over 62 groups by next June and contemplates a great deal more than 69 groups ultimately, it was said.

$5.2 Billion Plan to Assist Asia Proposed by British Nations

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP).—The British Commonwealth today proposed a $5,230,400,000 aid program to give 435,000,000 Asians a better life and to dam the spread of communism in the Far East.

The 6-year program—known as the Colombo Plan—also called upon governments outside the Commonwealth to help out with loans and grants. This was a clear invitation for the United States to link to the British plan its own Point Four program for aiding underdeveloped areas.

The plan would begin next June in the Commonwealth areas of India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Malaya, Singapore, North Borneo and Sarawak.

It suggested that another 135 million people in Burma, Indonesia, Thailand and Indo-China come under the program later. This would bring about one-fourth of the world's population into the program.

Of the total fund, 34 percent would go to build up transport and communications, 32 percent for agriculture, 18 percent for housing, health and education, 10 percent for industry and mining and 6 percent for fuel and power.

The Asian governments would put up $2,195,200,000. The remaining $3,035,200,000 would be obtained by:

1. Drawing on the 246 million pounds stering ($688,800,000) in sterling balances held in London to the credit of India, Pakistan and Ceylon. These balances represent credits built up during the World War II.
2. Private investment.
3. Government loans floated among private investors.
4. Loans from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.
5. Gifts and loans from other governments.

Details of the plan were worked out in talks here early in October.

Camp Pickett Better Now, Army Asserts

By The Associated Press

The Army yesterday said most causes for complaints about conditions at Camp Pickett, Blackstone, Va., have been corrected.

The Army ordered an investigation of complaints by members of the 43rd National Guard Division that has been training there since August. This Division is made up of men from New England.

It said yesterday that action has been taken to increase the ration allowance of items which the Guardsmen has said were inadequate. More men also have been assigned to serve the food, the Army stated.

The Army acknowledged that some of the New England Guardsmen had not been properly clothed when they left their home stations. But it said, by October 16 all but a few men requiring unusual size uniforms were fully equipped, and extra size clothing was on order for the few exceptions.

Recreational facilities, about which the Guardsmen complained, are being expanded as the need arises and as the money and materials become available, the Army said.

Arrangements also have been made with local civilian transport companies to ease transportation problems of men required to live at some distance from their daily training posts.

The Army said that restrictions on promotions in the division have been removed and that qualified men are being considered for promotion whenever vacancies exist.

The Army stated that medical facilities at Camp Pickett are now "deemed adequate."

Corpl. Smith

Pfc. Charles A. Dumas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Dumas of 114 Ingraham st. nw., recently wrote to his parents that he had been seriously wounded in the back and in one leg. Recuperating in a South Korean hospital, 500 miles from the front line, he said he didn't know where he would go from there. He gave no details as to how he had been wounded—just that they "had been trapped by the enemy."

Enlisting on his eighteenth birthday, Dumas took basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., before leaving for Korea in August. He was born in the Panama Canal Zone, where his father was a master sergeant with the Army Engineer Corps. After attending Paul Junior High School here, he was graduated in cabinet work from Bell Vocational School here.

Another 19-year-old District man, Corpl. William Layton Smith, jr., son of Mrs. Hazel H. Henderson, 242 34th st. ne., is slightly wounded. He enlisted at 17, and trained at Fort Knox. He left for Korea from Fort Lewis, Wash., in July.

The last letter Mrs. Henderson received was dated early in September.

"It's pretty bad over here," he wrote. "I guess I'm getting a little homesick, but this can't last forever. There's one thing about this war—the Koreans don't have many planes, and the ones they do have don't get off the ground—our jet planes knock them off before then."

This was the only thing he ever said about the fighting over there, according to his mother. A native of Charlotte, N. C., Smith attended Jefferson Junior High School here. He worked in the stockroom of Woodward & Lothrop's department store for six months before enlistment.

Reported missing in action were Lieut Carroll Wright, jr., 21, and Lieut. Ray M. Dowe, 23.

Lieutenant Wright of 805 Ridge pl., Falls Church, Va., was reported missing since November 2. In a recent letter, he said he had been recommended for a battlefield promotion and the Silver Star medal, his father said.

He attended high school in Manassas, Va., and was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, where he received a commission in the Army Reserve. He went on active duty last June and helped train National Guardsmen at Pine Camp, N. Y. In August he was ordered to the West Coast, his parents said, and arrived in Korea in September.

The parents of Lieutenant Dowe of 1413 N. Wakefield st., Arlington, Va., were notified yesterday that their son has been missing since November 4. Dowe was graduated last June from West Point and reported for duty in San Francisco. After being transferred to Fort Washington, he was sent to Tokyo in July and then to Korea.

Following his graduation from West Point he was married and his wife is now living in Harrison, N. J.

Communist China's Success in Korea Causes Mixture of Surprise and Chagrin in Europe

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP).—Chinese Communist successes in Korea were received with a mixture of surprise and chargrin in much of Europe tonight. Communist editors and broadcasters of the Soviet bloc expressed jubilation.

Black headlines screamed Gen. Douglas MacArthur's warning that "we face an entirely new war" and told of the retreat of United Nations forces.

The quick charge by the United States that Communist China had committed open aggression in Korea surprised some Western European leaders.

French foreign office circles took an "I told you so" attitude on the military reversal. They recalled that British and French diplomats had informally suggested that a neutral zone be left on the Korean side of the Manchurian border.

Peiping Position Now Strong

These sources said a neutral zone would have helped convince the Chinese that the U. N. had no aggressive intentions, but the forces had been advancing and it would be more effective to negotiate with Peiping from a position of strength.

Now, the French sources said, U. N. forces are in a position of weakness.

A French foreign office spokesmen commented, however:

"This is still a military matter. War is war. Sometimes the front goes forward and sometimes backward. We must wait and see."

British officials said they believed their government will oppose giving MacArthur the right to strike at Red Chinese bases in Manchuria. They stressed that Britain wants to avoid involving U. N. forces in Korea in a war against China.

As soon as the news of the American accusation against Communist China in the Security Council reached the British Foreign Office, Far Eastern experts went into a huddle with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin. Britain is particularly sensitive about the Chinese question because she has already recognized the Peiping regime.

Prime Minister Attlee was reported likely to call a special meeting of the cabinet. Bevin probably will make the government's position clear tomorrow in opening a two-day debate on foreign affairs in the House of Commons.

The Paris newspaper Ce Soir paced Communist comment with the declaration "Washington envisages the bombing of China."

"A crime against peace is being prepared," Ce Soir said, "and we must denounce it before public opinion while there is still time."

Communist Nations of Eastern Europe resounded with assertions that the United States has suffered a military catastrophe. Russia's official occupation newspaper in East Germany summed up the frontline news: "MacArthur's 'great offensive' ends in wild flight."

Communist - controlled news agencies gave credit for a smashing victory to the North Korean "People's Army" and did not mention Chinese "volunteers."

An independent West German newspaper, the Stuttgarter Zeitung, said MacArthur had assumed a gigantic responsibility by attempting to advance to the Yalu River.

"Efforts of Secretary of State Dean Acheson to prevent expansion of the conflict have now lost all meaning," it said. "What will happen now depends almost solely upon the Peiping government."

There was no official comment in Rome, but newspapers told in big headlines of the retreat.

Dutch newspapers were chagrined over MacArthur's decision to drive toward the Manchurian border in the first place. They termed the offensive a psychological failure. The Hague newspaper Die Nieuve Haagsche Courant asked whether MacArthur launched the drive on his own initiative or in consultation with Washington.

Dutch government spokesmen said they thought the U. N. offensive was untimely because it coincided with the arrival of Red China's delegation at Lake Success.

M'Arthur Tells U.N. It Must Fix Course

TOKYO, Wednesday, Nov. 29 (AP).—General MacArthur yesterday told the non-Communist powers they must decide quickly what to do about the grim fact that "we face an entirely new war" against Red China.

He issued a special communique suggesting that the war actually had begun and could be stopped only by a last-minute political solution.

MacArthur said the Chinese Communists already have thrown "a major segment" of their armies —200,000 men—into Korea.

They have shown "the obvious intent and preparation" to reinforce this spearhead with perhaps 300,000 more men now on the move in Manchuria, he added.

This, he continued, "has shattered the high hopes" that the Chinese Communists were making only token resistance in Korea.

The United Nations commander declared the issues raised by the inviolate Manchurian border are "beyond the authority of the United Nations military command."

Up to U. N. and Capitals

These issues can be decided only by the United Nations at Lake Success and in the world capitals, he maintained.

Thus MacArthur raised the question of whether, barring a quick political solution, the United Nations would give him authority to fight an all-out military campaign.

The alternatives seemed clear between the lines of his carefully-worded statement. He spoke of the "privileged sanctuary" in Manchuria where Chinese reinforcements are grouped, immune to Allied air attack.

The gravity of the hour was reflected by an urgent military conference between MacArthur and his top generals. This conference lasted until 1:30 a. m. today.

Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army in northwest Korea, and Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, commander of the Tenth Corps in the northeast, were summoned hastily to Tokyo.

There they talked for four hours with MacArthur and three of his staff—Maj. Gen. D. O. Hickey, acting chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, secretary of the United Nations military staff, and Brig. Gen. E. K. Wright, MacArthur's operations officer.

The participants declined to discuss the meeting but it probably was concerned primarily with military strategy.

Situation Quickly Changed

The problem now is to meet the Chinese Communist attack, which abruptly changed the war situation and destroyed the optimism which led MacArthur last week to express the hope that United States troops would be home by Christmas.

One unanswered question was whether the secret session was prompted by new instructions or new authorization from Washington.

It is no secret that military commanders here want the authority to bomb those supply centers and concentration points in Manchuria where the Communists have have organized for the attack.

MacArthur's communique said, in effect, that he sent his outnumbered forces into an offensive last week to throw off balance the Chinese preparations for the blows now raining down in Korea.

Now with his army being pressed back under the great weight of Chinese numbers, he intimated that he felt there was little time to waste in protracted political discussions.

No Prediction of Victory

The communique was one of the gravest statements he has made on the campaign. It was unrelieved by any long-range prediction of victory which had characterized his public statements even during the dark days of last July.

Pessimism has increased sharply among military men here and at the front. The Americans and their allies are slipping back toward the mood of last summer, when they were fighting superior numbers with inadequate weapons.

The military situation has not yet reached that stage. But it is obvious that a war with the vast Chinese Red armies would require much more allied power than there now is in the field.

MacArthur's use of the term "an entirely new war" opens a range of possibilities. These include the question of using Chinese Nationalist forces—perhaps 500,000 men—and thousands of anti-Communist guerillas on the Chinese mainland.

Most combat men believe the "new war" already has begun. The problem now is to see if it can be stopped.

If this "new war" cannot be halted quickly, the men fighting it want to use all available weapons.

21 Chinese Divisions Now Identified in Korea; U. N. Command Has 13, With Other Units

TOKYO, Nov. 28 (AP).—Dispatches from field headquarters in both northwest and northeast Korea today said 21 Chinese divisions were taking part in the Communist 200,000-man offensive against United Nations forces.

Chinese divisions usually number from 8000 to 10,000 men.

The bulk of the Reds—14 divisions—were deployed on the 75-mile-long northeast front and were elements of four distinct armies.

The remaining seven divisions were fighting in the northeast.

The four armies in the northwest were identified by the Eighth Army as the Sixty-sixth in the extreme west, the Thirty-ninth and Fortieth in the center of the line and the Thirty-eighth Army on the right flank.

Three divisions—the 196th, 197th, 198th—northeast and north of Taechon, Red supply point and road junction about 50 air miles from the Manchurian border.

Six divisions—the 115th, 116th, 117th, 118th, 119th, 120th—in the Unsan sector in the center of the Eighth Army front.

Three divisions—112th, 113th, 114th—in the Tokchon area on the Eighth Army right flank.

Two divisions—the 125th and 126th—in the Yongwon area, 13 miles northeast of Tokchon, also on the right flank.

Three divisions—the Fifty-ninth, Sixtieth, and Eighty-ninth—on the Changjin front in north central Korea.

Three divisions—not named by number—"tentatively identified." Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, Tenth Corps commander would not name them for publication.

One division—not named by number—believed in northeast sector. It was the third division of a three divisional Chinese army. The other two divisions have been identified but not announced.

By The Associated Press

The United Nations command in Korea includes seven full American divisions, six South Korean army divisions and other units ranging in size from the Thai battalion to a brigade of the second United States Marine division.

The United States Army divisions are the Third, Seventh, Second, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth, and the First Cavalry (Infantry).

The First Marine division is at full strength in Korea. Other American units include one regimental combat team of the Eleventh Airborne Division and two Army regimental teams.

Two British Commonwealth brigades are operating in Korea. One of these brigades includes reinforced battalion of the Australian army.

Other United Nations units include one Turkish brigade, a Philippine battalion and a battalion from Thailand.

Two of the six South Korean divisions, the Seventh and Eighth, are reported to have been badly mauled during the Chinese breakthrough on the right flank of the Eighth Army line in north central Korea.

5 Million 'Militiamen' Being Formed in China

LONDON, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—The Peiking radio said tonight that "several hundred thousand" Chinese Communist militiamen were taking up positions along the Manchurian frontier to guard against American aggression.

"As the result of repeated American air raids, the whole people of the northeast fully understand what a danger American aggression in Korea is to themselves and to China," the broadcast said.

Peking announced about one month ago that the Chinese Communists were forming an armed militia totalling 5,500,000 men to back up the "people's army."

Life of U. N.'s First Army Declared at Stake in Korea

By Hal Boyle

WITH THE UNITED STATES EIGHTH ARMY, Korea (AP).—The life of the first army to fight under the United Nations banner is at stake in the chill hills of North Korea.

Equally at stake is the success of the entire five months' effort to unite Korea by arms as a step towards world peace.

This startling turn taken by the Korean war can be summarized by an animal parable:

A terrier has long been fighting a marauding alley cat to keep her from the home he is protecting. One day he chases the cat across the cleared land toward the jungle trees.

As he nears the jungle, he sees the cat spitting at him from between the claws of a big tiger. Before he can halt, the tiger flicks out a paw and cripples one of the terrier's legs.

The terrier pauses. Most of the tiger's body lies in the jungle that is the tiger's own domain, but its forepaws stretch out into the clearing that it is the terrier's duty to guard. Between those paws, the alley cat dares him to come on.

The terrier sees no help, but his duty is clear. He must drive both cats, the small one and the large, out of the clearing.

He charges bravely forward. Both cats are ready. They draw back slightly, then lunge at him. The blow breaks one leg of the terrier and sends him reeling back. Again he turns and faces his foes. What next?

The immediate and decisive choice lies with the tiger, which can leap on the terrier and kill him—but to do that the tiger will have to emerge all the way from the jungle, and that might mean that men with torches and clubs would come and beat the tiger to death and burn down the jungle.

The tiger can fade softly back into the jungle and let the wounded terrier chase the alley cat back.

However, it is a young tiger, full of pride, and rather likes the idea of having the cat remain in the clearing as a symbol of the tiger's power.

The tiger also has a third choice. It can just stay there on the edge of the jungle and slap down the dauntless terrier every time he advances. This could go on over and over again until the terrier's owners decide either to call him off or go all-out to his aid. In soft purrs, the tiger meanwhile insists it is not even in the clearing.

The clearing is Korea; the jungle is China; the tiger is the Chinese Communist regime, and its paws are the "volunteers" now fighting the Eighth Army terrier on behalf of the defeated North Korean cat.

The scene of the fights is a 60-mile stretch of frozen mountains and winding, narrow roads in Northwest Korea.

The terrier Eighth Army was first mauled late in October when it ran into a surprise ambush by the Chinese tiger during a race to catch the North Korean army's remnants.

Last Friday the Eighth Army tried again. It had at its disposal fewer than ten of the 19 United Nations divisions in Korea. It faced at least 19 tentatively identified enemy divisions—11 Chinese and eight North Korean.

Saturday night the Reds counterattacked. They have shattered three Korean Republican divisions on the Eighth Army right flank, driving them back in disorder 20 miles.

That was the blow that broke the terrier's leg. Or, as military men say, it exposed the right flank. That badly crippled army probably now, as a result, may be at the mercy of the tiger's choice, many professional soldiers believe.

The enemy already stands less than 60 air miles from the former North Korean capital of Pyongyang. If the Reds can slash down those last miles, they have an excellent chance of bottling up or destroying the entire Allied attacking force.

Red China is said to have some 500,000 troops in Manchuria. By quickly massing in a giant offensive, they might reach Pyongyang in a week. It could be a tempting prospect, for in the small U. N. army of 110,000 men that might be thus surrounded

Shorter Term For Gilbert Is Sought

YORK, Pa., Nov. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Leon Gilbert jr., wife of the Army lieutenant who escaped death by a presidential commutation, said today she may seek to have the soldier's 20-year sentence reduced.

"I am very well pleased with the President's action, but I was shocked when the sentence was listed at 20 years. I expected it to be from three to five years and I think we may try to appeal to attain the reduction," she said.

Gilbert, 31, was convicted of misconduct in the face of enemy in action in southeastern Korea last July.

Mrs. Gilbert and her attorney, Judson E. Ruch of York, talked with the lieutenant in Tokyo last night.

Gilbert's wife said the attorney was the first to inform Gilbert had been commuted from death to 20 years.

"He was overwhelmed and overjoyed I know," she said. "The first thing he asked was how the children were. We have two, 4-year-old and one-year-old. He told me to make the best Christmas I could for them."

Puzzled Ministry Sets Up Britain's 'Project Icebolt'

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP)—The British Air Ministry set up "project icebolt" today to find out if England is being bombarded by flying saucers—or what.

Reports of strange ice falls from the sky have been pouring in from many parts of southern England for two weeks.

In Devon, dozens of chunks whizzed down into a flock of sheep a fortnight ago, killing a ewe, said the reports. Last Friday a piece weighing 5 pounds crashed through the roof of a London garage.

Yesterday D. J. Tunmore said he saw a block 12 inches long and 4 inches thick plummet from the clouds as he was riding his motorcycle near Braughing, in Hertfordshire. It lauded, unbroken, in a plot of grass only 3 feet from him.

About the same time, a 1-pound brick of an odd transparent material bounced to earth in front of the home of R. M. Butcher in Stebbing. "It is neither ice nor glass," Butcher said. "I don't know what it is."

Invaders Reported On Move in Tibet

CALCUTTA, Nov. 28 (AP).—Chinese Communist invaders of Tibet were reported on the move today after a lull of several weeks, with their forces reaching positions 200 miles northeast and 150 miles east of Lhasa.

The Calcutta Statesman's reporter at Kalimpong said the Chinese Communists had reached Chachukha on the Chamdo-Lhasa road 200 airline miles northeast of Lhasa, and advance units were at Taichao (Giama Dzong), 150 airline miles east of the capital.

Acheson Cancels Trip, Will Speak by Radio

Secretary of State Dean Acheson announced last night he will address a Protestant church group meeting in Cleveland Wednesday night by radio instead of in person "because of the developments in Korea."

He had been scheduled to speak before the National Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Reds 13 Miles Behind U. N. Lines

the situation was extremely grave on the east flank where three South Korean divisions collapsed three days ago.

The Reds were swiftly exploiting this breakthrough. Chinese Reds were reported swarming along "every road, gully and ridgeline" in an area from Tokchon north for 35 miles.

Four Chinese regiments smashed into the Pukchang area, 12 miles south of Tokchon.

In the breakthrough sector, Chinese at more than division strength—8000 to 10,000 men—smashed at South Korean troops attempting to cover the reorganization of the three divisions comprising the Republic of Korea Second Corps.

Eighth Army observers said the Chinese were striking with American football's "two-platoon" system. The Reds strike first with a regiment or division. When that force falters, a fresh regiment or division moves through to sustain the attack.

The U. S. Second Division, whose east flank and rear were exposed by the crumbling ROK line, withdrew to new defensive positions just north and east of Won. An Eighth Army spokesman said the Second Division had been "successful in disengaging" for an orderly withdrawal.

To the west of the Second Division, the United States Twenty-fifth Division suffered a bared west flank when the ROK First Division retreated Tuesday through Yongsan. It is 13 miles northwest of the Second Division position at Won.

The Eighth Army spokesman said the Twenty-fifth Division made an orderly pullback under strong pressure south of Yongbyon. The motorized withdrawal caused the Twenty-fifth to lose contact with the Reds who were advancing on foot.

The Twenty-fifth established new defense positions between Pakchon and Won.

The first ROK division was reported in new defense and delaying positions just south of Yongsan nad east of the Taeryong River.

On the west flank of the line, the United States Twenty-fourth Division reported no enemy pressure to positions near Pakchon.

Over the northeast Korea front, where one American element stands at the Manchurian border, two mysterious four-engined planes appeared Tuesday.

Captured Chinese prisoners said the Chinese objectives was to fight in Korea all winter "to destroy 50,000 or 60,000 Americans."

The critical battle-front developments impelled General MacArthur to summon his two top commanders in Korea to a secret emergency conference in Tokyo that lasted until 1:30 a. m. today.

They were Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, whose Tenth Corps is spread over 23,000 square miles in the northeast, and Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, whose Eighth Army five days ago opened an ill-fated "end-the-war offensive" in the noorthwest.

Before their arrival MacArthur bluntly acknowledged that his United Natiops command in Korea is confronted with "an entirely new war," as the result of full-scale Chinese intervention.

In an extraordinary communique MacArthur said: "This situation, repugnant as it may be, poses issues which must find their solution within the councils of the United Nations and the chancelleries of the world."

This was interpreted to mean that if the Chinese cannot be stopped by political pressure, the United Nations forces should be authorized to unleash their air aim against Red Manchuria where perhaps 300,000 Chinese reserves are massed.

At present Allied planes are forbidden to cross the Manchurian and Siberian frontiers on bombing missions.

Front line dispatches from the northeast front Tuesday said two "unidentified" four-engine planes and three Russian-built jets were observed over the American occupied border town of Hyesanjin.

It was the first mention of four-engined planes since early in the five months old Korean war touched off June 25 by the North Korean Communist invasion of South Korea.

The northwest battlefront blazed with heavy fighting along the entire 75-mile line.

Yalu Is Frozen Solid

Aerial observers reported the Yalu River has frozen solid, permitting untold numbers of Chinese reserves to cross over the ice. Allied bombers had smashed the main bridges.

A United States First Corps spokesman said air reports indicated that Chinese Reds were swarming along "every road, every gully and every ridgeline" for a distance of 35 miles north of Tokchon.

The fall of Tokchon collapsed the right wing of the Eighth Army line. It permitted Reds to seep on south almost to Pukchang, 12 miles southeast of Tokchon and only 5 miles north of the Allied supply base of Sunchon.

United States First Cavalry troops are holding Sunchon, which is 27 miles north of the former Communist caiptal of Pyongyang.

The First corps spokesman said if Chinese troops continue to push along their present line of advance they will threaten to cut down the main supply line from Pyongyang to the Chongchon river front.

It is west of the Chongchon river that the United States Twenty - Fourth, Twenty - Fifth and Second Divisions are falling back slowly agains overwhelming pressure. The First Cavalry also would be threatened with entrapment.

The United States positions were further imperiled when the Republic of Korea (ROK) First Division, holding a section of the northwest front between the United States Twenty-Fourth on their left and the United States Twenty-Fifth on their right, suddenly gave way Tuesday morning.

It was a "critical turn," reported AP Correspondent Don Whitehead.

The ROK First had been regarded as one of the best South Korean divisions. One officer who had been with the division called its retreat "a collapse."

This fall-back laid bare the left frank of the hard-pressed United States Twenty-fifth Division south of Unsan at the very center of the front.

Three Divisions Hit 25th

Three Chinese divisions attacked the Twenty-fifth. One—the Thirty fifth—regiment on the exposed flank managed to get its heavy equipment out to safety. An artillery battalion pulled back its guns through the road junction of Yongsan before the Reds could cut the escape route.

A similar situation developed on the right of the United States Second Division. There the ROK Seventh Division gave way, exposing the Americans to vicious flank assaults.

The Second Division fell back 15 miles to positions near Won, about 15 miles southeast of Unsan on the Twenty-fifth sector.

The Second Division had jumped off near Won last Friday when the United Nations offensive began.

On the western end of the front, the United States Twenty-Fourth Division pulled back closer to the Chongchon River under enemy frontal attack.

The Eighth Army offensive had rolled forward Friday and Saturday against only scattered opposition from the Reds.

First Attack on Saturday.

The first indication of serious battle came late Saturday when observation pilots saw a large concentration of Red troops massing southeast of Unsan. The spearpoint of a United States Twenty-fifth Division probed into this force and met heavy resistance.

Saturday night, under the light of a pale moon, the Chinese attacked. The weather was near zero. The Chinese surged forward against selected targets.

They picked the ROK First Division, the Twenty-fourth Regiment of the Twenty-fifth Division, the Ninth Regiment of the Second Division which straddled the Chongchon river, and farther east the ROK Seventh Division.

The attack caught some American units strung out in attack position and forced these to fall back. Some were cut off.

The First ROK Division fell back 4 miles on Sunday, bue regained the ground during the day.

Sunday night and again Monday night the Chinese poured increasing numbers of troops into the cracks they had developed. Special Chinese units seeped through the lines and raised havoc in the rear, hunting out artillery units. The South Korean Sixth, Seventh and Eighth Divisions were rolled back, leaving a breach that widened each hour.

Spreads to Every Sector

The attack spread to every sector of the front. Turkish troops rushed up, were surrounded and fought their way out with cold steel. They charged with fixed bayonets, killing several hundred Chinese, and taking 200 more prisoners.

Mauled remnants of the ROK Seventh and Eighth Divisions tried desperately to form a holding line to halt the push of Chinese troops toward the rear of the American econd and Twenty-fifth Divisions.

Small Red units, nevertheless, succeeded in planting roadblocks in the Eighth Army's central sector, behind Kunu.

On the northeast front, United States Marines were under attack Tuesday in a sleet storm northwest of Changjin reservoir.

There were no late reports on the developments, a Tenth Corps spokesman said Tuesday night. Chinese roadblocks were set up along the main supply line for the Marines south of Yudam, but the Marines cleared them before nightfall.

General Almond, en route to Tokyo, disclosed that there were seven Chinese Red divisions fighting in the northeast sector. Previously only two Chinese Communist divisions were identified in this area.

Road Cut in Five Places

At one time the Reds cut the supply road in five places north of the division base at Hagaru. The base is at the southern tip of frozen Changjin reservoir—an all weather power supply point for Manchuria as well as Korea.

The Marines and United States Seventh Division troops who switched over from the vicinity of the Manchurian border, had been attacking west and northwest toward the right flank of Chinese divisions bursting through the Eighth Army.

Almond said he was not alarmed over the Tenth Corps situation.

But he declined to tell Associated Press Corrospondent Stan Swinton whether the Tenth Corps would continue westward in the face of overwhelming numbers of Chinese troops.

"My policy is to find them where they are and kill them," he told Swinton.

On the extreme northeast end of the U. N. line the ROK Capital Division made the only advance of the day for U. N. troops. They gained 2 miles in a drive toward the Siberian frontier after recovering 1½ miles lost Monday when unexpected Red forces appeared north of Chongjin.

The Reds were blasted by gunfire from the United States heavy Cruised St. Paul and Marine Corsair planes.

More than 2500 incendiary bombs were dropped on the Chinese supply base at Taechon, while six other supply routes were under heavy attack.

Large numbers of Reds were believed killed by rockets and strafing runs. There were 234 sorties by fighter-bombers in the Taechon-Tokchon sector, and 175 were in direct support of ground forces.

New GI Insurance Programs Pushed

Two veterans' organizations urged Congress yesterday to provide $10,000 death benefits to families of servicemen.

The American Legion wants $10,000 grants paid to GI's who die in the line of duty in Korea.

The Veterans of Foreign wars went further by asking for a $10,000 payment to families of servicemen who die in uniform, regardless of cause.

Representatives of both groups testified before a House veterans subcommittee which is considering possible changes in the present GI life insurance program, now growing unwieldy. The subcommittee doesn't expect to act until next year.

The Legion didn't want present optional GI life insurance scrapped, but urged a series of amendments.

U. N. Seen Holding Line In North Korea

troops can fall back in reasonably good condition to a line running just north of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang and the east coast port of Wonsan. The peninsula is only 110 miles wide there, where full use of sea and air power and heavy land weapons can be employed against the much more numerous but more lightly armed Reds.

Some of our troops have a long way to pull back against the infiltrating and advancing Chinese, however. The next few days should tell.

Pentagon chiefs declared yesterday that despite some suggestions on Capitol Hill for use of the A-bomb against the Chinese Reds, MacArthur has not asked that it be used and Pentagon chiefs have not considered such a step.

U. N. Approval Lacking

The opinion was expressed that we would not A-bomb China without the approval of the United Nations, though the decision to use it would have to be ours.

As for bombing Manchuria with conventional explosives, Pentagon officials said this would be "approached with great reluctance" and only by direction of the United Nations. For it probably would rule out any chance remaining of localizing the present fighting and result in a long-drawn out war in China.

The question of U. N. aerial attacks across the Yalu River divides itself into three separate considerations, it was explained:

1. Following Red warplanes across the border during aerial battles under the "doctrine of hot pursuit." For some time, Russian-built aircraft have been attacking in North Korea and then ducking back across the river when counter-attacked by our fighters. MacArthur, it was said, suggested that it would be "very advantageous" if his orders were changed to permit such "hot pursuit."

Such action was considered by the joint Chiefs of Staff and taken up with the State Department. However, when several of our Allies objected the proposal was not approved, it was disclosed.

May Bomb Manchuria

(2) Tactical bombing of Chinese Communist air bases, supply columns, depots and troop concentrations in Manchuria. Officials indicated that "we may come to this" along with following enemy planes across the border.

(3 Strategic bombing of Chinese cities and other such targets. This is not now even under consideration, one source said.

Pentagon officials had only one possible explanation for the sudden turn of events in Korea—"very wrong intelligence estimates."

That was their answer when reminded that MacArthur had announced Friday that his forces were launching an "end-the-war-by-Christmas" offensive. Apparently, Far East chiefs wrongly concluded that the Chinese did not intend to put up much of a fight.

However, it was noted that aerial and other intelligence data is very difficult to obtain in the present situation. Chinese troops have been able to move across the frozen Yalu River and through the rough country at night without being observed. And there is evidence that the Chinese, like the North Koreans, are masters of camouflage.

Named to Direct H-Bomb Operation

stall in it. Estimates have been made that an H-bomb might be produced releasing 1000 times the energy of the Hiroshima-type atomic bomb.

Such a bomb woul produce blast damage 10 miles around, compared with the 1-mile radius of the Hiroshima circle of destruction. One scientist says it would burn people to death over a radius of up to 20 miles or more.

Construction of the new facilities will force about 1500 families in the area to relocate in the next 18 months to make way for the plants and the surrounding security and safety zone.

Exact boundaries of the site have not been disclosed, but the general area is about 15 air miles south of Aiken, S. C. and about 20 air miles southeast of Augusta, Ga.

Military considerations were among the factors on which selection was based.

The AEC's announcement gave no indication as to how long construction would take. The commission made no specific reference to an H-bomb either, and thus there was no indication as to when the AEC might expect to proof-test such a weapon—assuming that one can be developed.

Pike's Estimate Recalled

Commissioner Sumner Pike has estimated that prospects of perfecting an H-bomb lie "somewhere between the possible and the probable," and as recently as a month ago Chairman Gordon Dean said that appraisal still goes.

While the AEC's announcement yesterday did not mention the H-bomb, Dean at a news conference last month clearly implied that the new plant would be concerned with hydrogen bomb work. Moreover Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) used the phrase "H-bomb work" in a statement commenting on the AEC announcement.

The commission's formal announcement said the new project—to be designed, built and operated by the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co.—will "provide materials which can be used either for weapons or for fuels potentially useful for power purposes."

The commission emphasized that it would not fabricate any weapons at the South Carolina plant, which is to be known as the "Savannah River Plant."

chief concern centered on what was happening in Korea.

In a news conference at the end of the meeting, committee chairman Tom Connally reinforced the point made earlier in the day. Heretofore, Connally observed, the intent of the Chinese government was apparent only through the "infiltration" into Korea of their troops, and the moving over of soldiers already in the area.

"But now," said Connally, "the development makes clear that this is a governmental intervention by the Communist Chinese and has the sanction and is the action of the government. Therefore, it is a new problem, with new aspects."

According to the prepared statement issued by the committee—little modified from the earlier draft, apparently—Acheson and the Senators "discussed plans for dealing with this (Chinese-Korean problem and the problem of Formosa in the United Nations."

What these plans were Connally did not disclose. Nor did other Senators on the Committee. Neither did members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, before whom Acheson had a similar meeting in the afternoon.

From their silence, and from other reports, there came the inescapable conclusion that as yet the Administration has developed no new, or different, or radically revised plans.

It has, however, actions to perform on previously determined policy, and a number of steps yet to be taken before it decides whether Red China's—and Russia's—present aims are limited, and negotiable, or unlimited, and not capable of negotiation.

The decision, Administration officials believe, will emerge from different events in different places—from how many more troops China will pour into Korea; how far down the peninsula they will seek to fight; their reaction if United Nations forces hold a line high up in North Korea, and, equally important, what happens in current U. N. deliberations.

Acheson's reception in both foreign policy committees in Congress was described as "very harmonious." He was not attacked by hostile Republican legislators in either the Senate or House group. They, like he, appeared to take the line that the situation was too serious for quarreling.

Need for Military Strength

Though the words were slightly different, the statements to the press issued by the two committees after their session with Acheson told an identical story. They indicated that Acheson reviewed the European situation as well as that in the Far East and talked of "the urgent need for accelerated increases of military strength in the North Atlantic Treaty area."

According to some informants, he expressed the view that the situation in Europe is as grave as that in the Far East. He also said to have dealt with his fear that the Chinese aggression in Korea could serve to mask aggressive steps by Russia in the West.

Acheson discussed with both committees the urgent need for Congressional action to give food relief to Yugoslavia. Today, Assistant Secretary of State George W. Perkins will lead off the Administration's appeal for an additional 38 million dollars of aid, in open hearings before the house Foreign Affairs Committee.

No Talk of Using A-Bomb

Acheson did not talk, nor was there discussion in the committees, about the use of the atom bomb in the Korean war. It appeared that there was, however, some talk of using troops of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Chinese government in Formosa.

Hitherto, Acheson has vigorously opposed their use and undoubtedly would not change his position unless it became clear that a general, all-out war with Red China had become an actuality.

In the State Department yesterday, where no one attempted to dissemble the gravity of the situation or the extreme concern about it, officials continued with an exercise engaged in ever since there was a sign of Chinese intervention in Korea, or, in fact, ever since the outbreak of the conflict.

This was to total the conflicting evidence on whether China and Russia were willing to risk a war now or were even inviting a war, or whether they were merely pressuring or bargaining within circumscribed limits.

Bridges Hears Bradley Will Get MacArthur Post

By the United Press

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N.H.) said yesterday he has heard a "rumor" that Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will replace Gen. Douglas MacArthur as United Nations commander in Korea.

He cited the report in a formal statement issued while the Senate debated Allied reversals in Korea stemming from Chinese Communist intervention.

"To replace MacArthur would be an irreprable blunder," Bridges said. "We need all this man's military genius to offset the political mistakes of the Truman-Acheson combine."

praisal of the United Nations action in Korea is the Soviet appraisal. He has admitted that they have been preparing for a long time to resist the United Nations.

"He has laid the foundation for the judgment of the Council and has shown more clearly than ever before the serious nature of the issue before the Council. He has made it clear that the Chinese Communist intervention in North Korea is the consummation of a design to use military force without regard for the consequences."

Wu took notes as Austin told the Security Council the grave facts of Chinese Communist aggression must be faced squarely by the people of the world—and especially the Council.

Austin asked Wu 20 direct questions that, in sum, boiled down to: Why have you thrown 200,000 troops into Korea against United Nations forces and what do you want?

Austin also urged the Council to act soon on a six-nation resolution demanding that the Chinese Communists get out of Korea. This would promise to protect Peiping and Soviet boundaries with Korea.

Wu did not answer Austin's questions directly and said he had come here to talk about American aggression against Formosa. But before he completed his one hour and 50-minute statement he had ranged all over Asia.

He told countries backing the United States not to "pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the United States — because if you support United States aggression you must bear the consequences of your actions."

He said Peiping let volunteers cross the Korean border to fight U. N. forces because the Chinese saw the "flames" of war coming closed to their border. He said the Chinese people are volunteering in great numbers to go to the aid of the Korean people.

Wu described North Korea as a country "bound by close ties of friendship" to the people of China, who "cannot afford to stand idly by in the face of this serious situation brought about by the United States Government's aggression against Korea and the dangerous tendency toward the extension of war.

"The Chinese people have witnessed with their own eyes Taiwan (Formosa) fall prey to this aggression, and the flames of the United States war of aggression against Korea leap towards them.

"Thus, stirred into righteous anger, they are volunteering in great numbers to go to the aid of the Korean people. Resistance to United States aggression is based on self-evident principles of justice and reason.

"The Chinese people's government sees no reason whatever to prevent their voluntary departure for Korea to participate, under the command of the Korean people's democratic republic, in the great liberation struggle of the Korean people against United States aggression."

Wu also demanded that the Council order the withdrawal of U. N. forces from Formosa. The United States says there are only 44 United States military people on Formosa and they are part of the military attached to the Embassy. Finally, Wu demanded that the Council order the immediate withdrawal of all U. N. forces from Korea.

The U. N. said 3000 persons were here for the meeting. Only 500 could sit in the council room.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik fought for more than an hour today to prevent Austin from speaking. He finally had a vote on a proposal to let Wu Hsui-chuan, chief Peiping delegate, speak before the American. Malik lost, 8 to 1, with India and Yugoslavia abstaining.

Austin let go with both barrels of a broadside. He said:

"Last week the forces of the United Nations opened a general attack designed to finish their assigned task of repulsing aggression and restoring international peace and security in the area. This attack has been repulsed in circumstances which make it clear that Chinese Communist armed forces totaling more than 200,000 men are now engaged in North Korea. They are supported by heavy reinforcements moving forward from behind the international boundary.

"It appears clear beyond any doubt that what all the free world hoped was an intervention for limited purposes is in fact aggression open and notorious. It will be recalled that yesterday I used that word, 'aggression,' and then withdrew it, saying that I would not use it; I would use only the word, 'intervention,' until the facts came to our knowledge which would justify the use of the word, 'aggression.' I now employ it here in this Council, and before all the world, by direction of my Government.

"The consequences of these facts must be faced squarely by the people of the world, and more particularly, by this Council. Because such consequences are potentially so grave. I considered it essential to review the recent history of events in the Far East."

Austin recalled that the U. N. action in Korea received support from 53 of the 60 U. N. members.

Austin asked Wu, sitting several spaces down the horseshoe council table from him:

"Did the Chinese Communists go into Korea . . . on a sentimental journey? Was the aggression really in the interest of the Chinese people, as has been proclaimed, or was it on behalf of the great Russian power which has already taken so many benefits away from Manchuria at the expense of the Chinese people?

Austin repeated that the United States has no territorial ambition in Formosa. He went over the Chinese Communist and Russian charges of American aggression against Formosa and China and told of American aid and help to China in more than 100 years. Then he went on:

"Can the representative tell us how many Chinese Communist troops have entered Korea and are there now?

"What is the organizations of these troops?

"It is quite clear that they are in fact organized . . . on an army, corps and divisional basis. Does the representative still maintain that these forces are composed only of volunteers?

"Will the representative tell the Security Council how long the Peiping regime has been planning and preparing this aggression?

"Was all this being done while the Peiping radio was protesting the peaceful intentions of the Peiping regime?

"If the representative persists in telling us that the intervention was entirely voluntary, can he explain the voluntary manner in which their supplies have been organized, dispatched across the frontier and distributed?

"Will he tell us whether the aircraft which have attacked from bases in aMnchuria were also 'volunteers?'

"How could private Chinese citizens come into possession of jet planes?

"Can the representative tell us what was his government's estimate of the United Nations objectives which brought it to decide to commit this aggression?

"What led his government to ignore and set aside the reiterated statements by the United Nations bodies and by my own Government that there were no designs on Chinese territory or legitimate interests?

"If his government was aware of these reassurances but did not believe them, what more could the Security Council conceivably do to reassure the Peiping authorities that the United Nations does not in fact have any such evil designs?"

more ominous speech than the Chinese Communist made today.

The speech was regarded as ominous for one reason above all. On November 15, before the ill-fated MacArthur offensive had begun, Assistant Secretary of State Dean Rusk said that if Communist China's aims were limited they were negotiable; if they were unlimited they were not negotiable.

The overwhelming impression left by Wu's speech today was that Communist China's aims were unlimited. The Peiping spokesman did not even mention the power plants along the Yalu River, although he did say that China and Korea were separated by only a narrow river, and that China's security interest in Korea was self-evident.

He said the Chinese Communists were "firmly determined to recover Taiwan (Formosa) and all other territories belonging to China," a phrase he did not define for the benefit of any Burmese, Siamese, Indians or Pakistani who happened to be listening to him.

Sees Japan "Heart" of Policy

He described Japan as the heart and headquarters of the American "imperialist" policy in all of the Far East. He hinted that the Chinese Communist regime would not rest until American and other non-Communist influence was driven from all Korea.

He pictured the French defense, with American support, against Ho Chi Minh in Indo-China as a threat to China's borders; he spoke approvingly of the fact that the Communist-led Huks in the Philippines were still fighting; and although he did not mention Malaya, Indonesia or other Far Eastern areas, he pictured Communist China as the friend and inspiration of all the "oppressed peoples of Asia."

The second reason the speech sounded so ominous to non-Soviet ears was its 100-percent incorporation of Soviet ideas and even Soviet phrases. Although Wu delivered the speech in a harsh and shrill Chinese, the words in translation had a familiar Russian ring.

He talked of the American "voting machine" in the Assembly—a phrase the Russians here have used repeatedly.

He followed a favorite Soviet tactic of quoting from New York newspapers to prove the wickedness of American official policy.

The Moscow-trained Wu copied the Russians almost word for word in saying "the lies and deceptions uttered by Truman, Acheson, Austin and the like are all outweighed by a few voluntary confessions by MacArthur"—in the general's famous message to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He even used exactly the same alegations against American businesses in Formosa that Vishinsky had made to the Assembly's political committee yesterday. In all of Wu's speech one could detect not one thought, one sentence, one word, to suggest that it was put together independently in Peiping without Russian guidance, approval and perhaps Russian dictation as well.

Held "Soviet Appraisal"

This was why Ambassador Warren R. Austin, leader of the American delegation, said afterwards that Wu's appraisal of the Korean situation was nothing other than "the Soviet appraisal."

The speech, said Austin, "has shown more clearly than ever before the serious nature of the issue before the Council"—the issue being Chinese intervention in Korea. In the light of this speech, Austin declared, the Chinese intervention is clearly "the consummation of a design to use military forces without regard for the consequences."

What will the U. N. do about it? Wu's speech would have shattered hopes of negotiating with him even if the Chinese troops were not now fighting U. N. forces in Korea. Nobody has wanted negotiation more ardently than Trygve Lie, the U. N. Secretary General but even Lie conceded privately on Friday, after a half-hour talk with Wu, that negotiation with this delegation would be hopeless.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
WU HSIU-CHUAN
. . . listening to U. S. charge

The Security Council now has before it a six-nation resolution offering assurances and warnings to the Chinese Communists, and calling on them to withdraw from Korea. This, too, has a hollow ring today in view of the war news from Korea, but the American delegation intends to press the resolution to a vote, and perhaps to stiffen its language by amendments.

The resolution contains a veiled warning that the Chinese Communists cannot count on the protection of their border interests or their border itself if they continue to intervene. But this was intended to be a conciliatory resolution, and Wu showed today not the slightest interest in conciliation or in promises from the "imperialists" of the west.

The resolution, moreover, may be delayed by every filibustering tactic known to the Russians, and is sure to be vetoed in the end. Thereupon the sponsors will rush it to the vetoless Assembly, which will be in session for about three weeks more.

The trouble with all this is that events in Korea will not wait. Any day now MacArthur may ask the United Nations for authority to bomb the supply routes and airfields in Manchuria from which the Chinese armies have poured into Korea.

He already asked for it about a week ago, in the form of a query to Washington whether he could invoke the old doctrine of "hot pursuit" and go into Manchurian skies to fight the planes raiding Korea.

The State Department asked the British, and possibly others, what their attitude to such a request would be. The British then said they opposed it, and they still oppose it—at least until after the debate in Parliament.

The answer to the immediate emergency will be found not here, but first of all in Washington, where the Administration was still divided on the subject up to today, and then in high-level consultations between Washington, London and Paris.

This much is sure: The decision facing the U. N. is far graver than when the Korean war began, and may well be the most serious since the U. N. was born.

Moncay Noose Tightens

SAIGON, Indo-China, Nov. 28 (U.P.). — Fifty French troops stationed near the Chinese frontier fought their way to safety in Hacoi today after the Chuphaisan outpost was overrun by Communist-led rebels. Loss of Chuphaisan tightened the noose around Moncay, 23 miles away.

French Cabinet Crisis Over Moch Grows

the Catholic Popular Republican Movement (MRP) and the Radical Socialists, a right-of-center group representing small merchants and farmers.

Communists led the fight to Moch, but it is believed some members of the MRP also voted against him. Parlimiantary observers said there was a general dislike in the Assembly for Moch personally. Socialists felt that Moch had been stabbed in the back by presumed friends. The Socialists led the move to resign.

The Pleven government is France's sixteenth since the liberation from the Germans in 1944. Now five and a half months old, it is well beyond the average age of French governments.

President Auriol issued a statement saying he appreciated the spirit of solidarity that prompted the cabinet to resign, but that he felt this was contrary to the spirit of the constitution. He said he asked Pleven "if he judged it useful to ask for a vote of confidence."

The cabinet decided to meet Wednesday to decide on its next step and determine how the vote of confidence might be asked. If the cabinet should be defeated on such a vote, new elections might be necessary at once.

In a speech to a political meeting tonight, former Premier Paul Reynaud predicted that "Parliament may soon find itself in a deadlock that would lead to general elections in a very brief time."

"The affair of the generals" has been smouldering 18 months. It stemmed from a trip that Gen. Georges Revers, then chief of staff of the French army, made to war-torn Indo-China in the spring of 1949. He made a special reportt of his findings.

Among his recommendations was that a military man be appointed to take over civil administration as well as the conduct of the war against the Communist-led Viet Minh rebels.

In Hands of Viet Minh

In September of 1949 it was revealed this secret report had fallen into the hands of the Viet Minh. Investigation indicated the original leak had been through Gen. Charles Emmanuel Mast, one-time French resident general in Tunisia. Mast was being touted for the over-all command in Indo-China, which Revers recommended.

Revers was relieved as chief of staff. Mast was already on the inactive list.

Several inquiries followed. It was brought out that a Roger Peyre, identified by former Premier Georges Bidault as "a double or even a triple agent," had had entry to high places and had fled to Brazil.

Communists charged that Moch, as Minister of the Interior at that time, permitted Peyre to flee in an effort to hinder the investigations.

In Rio de Janeiro, Cezar Garcez, head of he Brazilian frontier air and maritime police, said Peyre has been in Paraguay since last December. He said there has been no record of Peyre's return to Brazil since then.

Planned Berlin Vote 'Illegal,' Soviet Says

First Meeting

Wage Board Takes Office Under Ching

The Government's new wage stabilization board held its first meeting yesterday immediately after its members took the oath of office.

The nine-member board, headed by former Federal Mediation Chief Cyrus S. Ching, will administer wage controls if and when they are invoked to fight inflation. Its first meeting was just to get organized.

Public representatives on the board, in addition to Ching, are John Dunlap, Harvard economics professor, and Clark Kerr, economics professor at the University of California.

Industry members are Henry R. Arthur, Hinsdale, Ill., research director of Swift & Co.; J. Ward Kenner, Akron, Ohio, vice president of B. F. Goodrich Co., and Rubin Robertson, jr., Cincinnati, Ohio, president of Champion Paper and Fiber Co.

Labor members are Harry C. Bates, president of the AFL bricklayers union; Emil Rieve, president of the CIO Textile Workers; and Elmer E. Walker, vice president of the International Association of Machinists.

Airways to Be Sold

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Nov. 28 (AP).—New Zealand's anti-Socialist government today decided to put up the state-owned National Airways for sale. The service was started by the Labor Party, defeated in the national election last year.

FRANKFURT, Germany, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Russia notified the Allies today that she regards a municipal election to be held in western Berlin Sunday as illegal, and said it is calculated to "increase the difficulties" of the people in the western sectors of the capital.

Sergei A. Dengin, Soviet control commissioner for Berlin, made the notification to the three Allied commands of the city in a formal letter.

"Regarding the illegal separate elections which are scheduled for West Berlin December 3, the Soviet authorities reject these elections because they are deepening Berlin's split and even increase the difficulties of the West Berlin population," Dengin said.

Adenauer Charges Soviet Involves U. S. in War

BERLIN, Nov. 28 (U.P.). — West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer accused Russia tonight of involving the United States in a war with Communist China.

Adenauer, speaking before 5000 followers here, lashed out at French and German quarters blocking Europe's effort to rearm.

He was obviously stung by Socialist gains in three states in the American zone where Socialist leader Kurt Schumacher opposed his proposals to include Germans in the West European armies.

Final figures in the Bavarian election, published today, gave the Socialists 28 percent of the popular vote, as compared with 27.4 percent for the Christian Democrats. In 1946 the Christian Democrats got 52.2 percent. Adenauer's party managed to win a one-seat margin, 64 to 63, in the 204-man state parliament because of the proportional representation election law.

May Borrow

Snyder Sees Deficit Rise From War

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said yesterday his estimate that the Government will spend 45 billion dollars and go 2 billion dollars in the red during the fiscal year is "a low figure as things look now."

Snyder's new conference comment on the way "things look now" apparently was a reference to the dark turn in the situation.

The Government's fiscal year ends next June 30.

Snyder made the estimate of a 2 billion dollar deficit for the 12 months before a Congressional committee recently. At the time, his figure was considered high by some officials.

But Snyder said yesterday the figure now seems more likely to be too low rather than high.

"If military purchases are stepped up, it would change the picture materially," he said.

The Treasury chief said the department may seek to borrow some additional funds before June 30 after all. Some weeks ago he had stated that no "borrowing" was expected.

Snyder also told reporters:

The 1¾ percent interest rate set by the Treasury on 5-year notes it will offer in a forthcoming refinancing transaction are "in line with" the 2½ percent rate which prevails on long term bonds.

Collectors of internal revenue from all parts of the country will meet here tomorrow to discuss collection activities under the social security and income tax bills passed by Congress earlier this year.

Wreck Toll Now 78

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP).—The toll in the Thanksgiving eve collision of two Long Island Rail Road trains rose to 78 today with the death of Samuel Goldstein, 55 of Rockville Centre, N. Y.

Boy, 7, Is Found Chained in Box in Mother's Yard

SOUTH WHITTIER, Calif., Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Eugene de Leon, 7, was found chained in a box in the rear of his mother's home today.

Mrs. Marjorie de Leon, the child's mother, was absent when officers, summoned by neighbors, arrived. Mrs. de Leon was sought for an explanation.

Incoherent, the boy only mumbled in response to questions. He was found with his knees drawn under his chin, cramped in the box, his head on his crossed arms.

A deliveryman said he had seen the child two weeks ago inside the De Leon home, chained by the ankle to a bedstead.

Students Demonstrate

SEVILLE, Spain, Nov. 28 (U.P.). An estimated 500 students demonstrated today for lower streetcar fares. They paraded through the streets with posters and picketed the city hall and the local newspaper.

Stringent Rules For Aliens Issued

By the United Press

The United States Immigration Service backed up the new subversive control law yesterday by issuing a stringent new set of rules to bar politically undesirable aliens from entering the country.

Effective immediately, the order also provides for deportation of foreigners now here who are suspected of past or present membership in Communist, Fascist or other totalitarian groups. This includes German Nazis, followers of former Italian dictator Benito Mussolini, and Spanish Falangists.

The rules will have no immediate effect on diplomats from Russia and Communist satellite nations now in the United States, but may apply to many coming here in the future.

Envoys Generally Exempted

Ambassadors, public ministers and career diplomats accredited by a recognized foreign government will be admitted unless it can be proven they are entering to engage in subversion, espionage or sabotage. Top United Nations delegates and resident officials receive the same clearance, and the families of all such officials may accompany them.

This means that, with but few exceptions, no member or former member of the Communist Party can enter thic country. Past members of other totalitarian groups can obtain temporary permits at the Attorney General's discretion if they were nominal or childhood members only and took no genuine share in party activities.

Except for the top-ranking diplomats, any person with diplomatic immunity now may be deported without any consultation with the Secretary of State. His consent had been needed in the past.

Travel Can Be Restricted

Most of the totalitarian diplomats can be limited in their travels here to within a small radius of their office.

The law provides for deportation of any alien now here who is unable to prove he is or was not a totalitarian group member or that the organization was not tainted. The Justice Department, however, is not expected to take any immediate action on that proviso.

Aliens who cannot be shipped out because no other nation will take them will be supervised somewhat similar to criminals on parole. Violators would be subject to criminal prosecution and fines of $1000, a year's imprisonment, or both. Previously a person who lived here 7 years even though he once belonged to a totalitarian group had been allowed to stay.

Brief Backs Conviction Of 11 Reds

By The Associated Press

The Justice Department yesterday branded America's top Communist leaders as "enemies of the State" and asked the Supreme Court to uphold conspiracy convictions against them.

The department filed with the court a 70,000-word brief replying to the appeal of the 11 Red leaders who were convicted last year in New York of conspiracy to violently overthrow the Government.

Answering contentions by the Communist chiefs that they are victims of unconstitutional action, the department declared that the bill of rights was never intended to serve "as a convenient underground for conspirators in the service of foreign governments."

The court has set Monday for final arguments in the case. It refused Monday to grant a delay sought by the defendants so they could enlist the aid of left-wing British lawyer, B. N. Pritt.

The Communist group argued in a brief last week attacking the constitutionality of the 1940 Smith Act under which they were convicted.

In its reply the Justice Department asserted:

"No government is required to foster a market place—not of ideas, but of conspiracies—organized and directed toward its destruction.

"The bill of rights was never intended to be a hiding place for the enemies of the state and a convenient underground for conspirators in the service of foreign governments and organizations."

D. C. Phone Men To Aid Repair Work in Jersey

Washington telephone linemen in two truck convoys left here early yesterday for storm-battered New Jersey to help speed repairs on hard-hit communication lines.

Chesapeake and Potomac officials said the local teams could be spared because this area suffered comparatively little damage in last week's storm.

The local linemen, they added, can work in New Jersey because equipment and repair techniques are standard htroughout the Bell System. Each convoy comprised 20 men and supervisors, 10 line trucks and one repair truck.

Easing of Credit Curbs Urged

Relaxation of the Government's new credit curbs on veterans' home buying was urged yesterday at the fifty-ninth annual convention of the U. S. Savings and Loan League.

The league's veterans affairs committee adopted a resolution proposing that the Government return to the old no-down-payment rule for veterans on all except new homes.

Under the existing regulations, veterans' down-payments on all types of housing generally range 5 percent below the 10 to 50 percent payment required of other buyers.

The resolution, submitted for approval by the full league convention, protested that those restrictions "discriminate" against veterans without helping the defense effort.

A convention report submitted by the league's committee on government housing also condemned the government housing program launched in 1949 as an "experiment in socialism."

The report charged Federal officials directing the program with "misue of public funds" in promoting public housing. It complained that a number of unnamed housing officials in the past year have gone on "banquet tours" around the country trying to influence various communities to take part in the Federal program.

Iraq Regent Divorces His Egyptian Princess

BAGHDAD, Iraq, Nov. 28 (U.P.). Emir Abdul Illah, regent of Iraq, has divorced his wife, the Princess Faiza, at her own request, it was announced today.

The Princess, daughter of Kemal Bey Tarabulsi, Egyptian commandant of police in Cairo, asked for the divorce because she could not conform with certain traditions of the Iraqi royal family, a communique said. Princess Faiza left Baghdad for Egypt last summer and has not returned.

2 Sentenced in Atom Spy Case

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Two cohorts of atom spy Harry Gold were sentenced to maximum jail terms today for obstructing justice and Federal Judge Irving Kaufman said he regretted he could not impose stiffer penalties.

Abraham Brothman, 36, was sentenced to seven years in prison and fined $15,000 and his business partner, Miriam Moskowitz, 34, was sentenced to two years and fined $10,000.

They were the first two persons to be sentenced in the United States as the result of the confession of Dr. Klaus Fuchs, British atomic scientist, who worked with Gold to steal atom secrets for Russia.

United States Attorney Irving Saypol told the court that "if the defendants had not been engaged in their chenanigans in 1947, Harry Gold might have been arrested three years earlier." Gold faces the possibility of a death penalty next month when he is sentenced for espionage. He was the Government's principal witness gainst Brothman and Miss Moskowitz.

Brothman and Miss Moskowitz were convicted by a jury last Wednesday

Protestant Council Of Churches Hailed

By Tom Schlesinger
Post Reporter

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28.—The National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States of America, which opened its constituting convention here tonight, was described as "the greatest forward step toward religious unity which America has yet seen."

In making this observation, the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of New York City's Christ Methodist Church, declared that "the Protestant Church is far more united that its critics realize. Although divided into denominations, the churches are united in common objectives for saving the souls of man and the social system under which he lives."

Addressing the opening of a four-day session at the Municipal Auditorium, Dr. Sockman told an estimated 3500 clergy and lay delegates that the merger of the eight interdenominational agencies into the National Council "parallels in American Protestantism the position of the United Nations in the international realm."

"These church agencies are not weak organizations pooling their resources to save them from bankruptcy," he asserted, "the Protestant Church was never farther from bankruptcy than it is today."

Dr. Sockman scored "popular preaching" as "a major weakness of Protestantism."

"Crowds drawn by brilliant, spectacular or bizarre preachers do not give strength to the church," he maintained. "We must advance from mass meetings of the curious to mass movements of the consecrated."

The opening session of the constituting convention marks the climax of nine years of extensive planning by major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches to merge their agencies of cooperation.

Official delegates represent 29 communions, 25 Protestant and 4 Eastern Orthodox, having 150,000 churches and an estimated 31 million communicant members. The council will represent roughly 90 percent of Protestant and Eastern Orthodox Church membership in the United States.

Two large denominations missing are the Southern Baptist Convention with almost seven million members and the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, with approximately one and a half million members.

Among the smaller denominations not joining are the Seventh-Day Adventists and the Church of the Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ.

High ranking churchmen of five major denominations officiated at tonight's colorful and solemn ceremony of worship and thanksgiving. They were: Dr. P. O. Bersell of Minneapolis, president of the Augustana Lutheran Church; Bishop John A. Gregg, African Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. Benjamin R. Lacy, jr., of Richmond, moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States; the Right Rev. Frank W. Sterrett of Bethlehem, Pa., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and Dr. Henry A. Vruwink, president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church of America.

The new council will be constituted tomorrow morning.

New Snowfall Adds to Tasks Of Stricken Eastern Cities

By The Associated Press

More snow fell in the East yesterday adding to the task of cities still digging out from the savage weekend blizzards.

Another one to two inches of snow fell on Pennsylvania and in scattered areas of Ohio.

Despite the temporary setback, however, Pittsburgh and Cleveland were slowly winning the struggle to return to normal.

The Weather Bureau said no new heavy snow was in prospect and that temperatures will remain at or below freezing in the snow area.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia eased credit restrictions for storm victims.

The list of storm dead swelled to 281, the cleanup job adding to the toll.

Total storm damage in 22 eastern and midwestern States was estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

This was the picture in the areas of major storm damage:

Pittsburgh: Most steel mills, coal mines and industrial plants hoped to get production rolling today. Department stores set the same day for their reopening. Colleges and schools hope to reopen Thursday. Public transportation was not expected to return to normal for a week.

Cleveland: Main highways were clear and most schools and colleges expect to be open today. Industry called back its workers.

(The United Press reported that highway patrolmen set up roadblocks along the Ohio-Pennsylvania border near Pittsburgh, East Liverpool and Youngstown, and were halting all motorists who were not making emergency trips.)

New York and New Jersey: Some 225,000 households still were without electricity. About 90,000 telephones still were out.

Deaths by States in the storm area are Ohio 55, Pennsylvania 37, New Jersey 34, New York 36, Michigan 21, Kentucky 17, West Virginia 14, Alabama 13, Indiana 15, Massachusetts 2, Connecticut 6, Illinois 6, Maryland 4, South Carolina 4, Tennessee 4, Maine 4, Georgia 2, North Carolina 2, Delaware 2, New Hampshire 1, Vermont 1 and Virginia 1.

Many Election Charges Filed

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate Elections Subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) will decide today what to do about a flood of complaints of voting irregularities resulting from the recent election.

Charges are on file from 14 States, including three involving primary elections last summer.

Among the charges is one involving a "smear" group that allegedly operated in several States, particularly Maryland, Utah, Ohio and Pennsylvania during the election, and North Carolina in last summer's senatorial primary. Through union labels on the printing, it is reported, the matter has been traced to two printing plants, one in Washington, D. C., and another in Minneapolis.

In Utah, a circular reproduced photograph taken during World War II, which was designed to show Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) at a dinner with a group including several persons since accused of being Red sympathizers.

In North Carolina a circular showed a Negro and bore the false caption: "Senator Graham's choice for West Point." In Maryland a circular contained a picture of Senator Millard Tydings superimposed on that of Communist Leader Earl Browder.

The States where irregularities have been reported, include New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Connecticut, Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Indiana, Florida and North and South Carolina.

Police Reserve Standards to Be Relaxed

The District Commissioners yesterday relaxed age and height requirements for Metropolitan Police Reserve Corps candidates because of recruiting trouble encountered under present standards.

New requirements recommended by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett raise the maximum age for men from 55 to 65 and reduce the minimum height for men from 5 feet six inches to 5 feet 2. Requirements for women remain the same as before.

Capt. Francis G. Pilkerton, administrative head of the force that was created primarily for civil defense work, said about 400 applications for membership have been made. Barrett has said he wants a force of 4000. Pilkerton said he hoped training classes for the recruits could start in some precincts by the first of next year.

The commissioners yesterday also asked P. Y. K. Howat, Washington businessman, to organize a civil defense Rescue and Repair Section. Th job, similar to one Howat did in the last war, consists of forming rescue teams for work in damaged buildings, clearing debris from streets, demolishing damaged structures and repairing others and assembling the equipment to do this work.

Bids Are Asked On Glebe Rd. Widening

Bids on the widening of N. Glebe rd. in Arlington County between Fairfax dr. and Randolph st. will be opened December 19, it was announced yesterday by the Virginia State Highway Department.

The improvement would replace the present winding two-lane stretch with a four-lane divided highway. A bad dog-leg in the present road at Wilson blvd. also would be eliminated.

Florida Police Held Bribed on Big Scale

. . . admits taking bribes

By the United Press

A former Miami deputy sheriff told Senate investigators yesterday that big-time gamblers have been bribing police on a grand scale, tampering with grand juries and raking in huge sums from "suckers" in the Nation's winter playground.

George Patton, former Dade County deputy, said he personally collected about $50,000 in "payoffs" from gamblers during the first nine months of this year and split with other law officers.

He also brought in the name of Florida Gov. Fuller Warren. He said a man claiming friendship with Warren said the Governor sent him to take over a plush gambling house in Hialeah, a Miami suburb.

Patton, who recently "spilled everything" to a Dade County grand jury, told his lurid tale of gambling and political corruption [illegible] to the Senate Special Crime Investigating Committee.

The grand jury indicted Dade County Sheriff Jimmy Sullivan largely on the basis of Patton's testimony. Patton said several fellow deputies had been indicted but he had been promised immunity from prosecution for telling his story.

Patton said Col. Leon Bishop, whom he described as a member of "Warren's staff," told him "Warren had sent him to Hialeah to take over the crap games, roulette wheels and all gambling operations" except horseracing at a swanky gambling house on Lindsey court. He said he met Bishop during a raid on the Lindsey court "joint."

He said Bishop made a phone call during the raid. Five minutes later, Patton testified, he was called on the phone and told by Miami gambler George Bowers to "get the hell out of there," because Bishop was a "close friend" of Warren. Patton said the case against the gambling house was later thrown out of court because of "illegal entry" and he shared a $1000 payoff with Assistant County Solicitor Emmett Kehoe who was to split his "take" with Assistant Jim Flagherty.

He also testified that Alfred Petrucci, a Miami Beach policeman, who was a member of a Dade County grand jury early this spring, complained to Patton that he was not getting a big enough bribe for helping to secure an investigator who would turn in a "negative" report on gambling. He said the investigator was a private detective known as Sanford.

Patton said Ben Cohen, attorney for the S & G gambling syndicate who has appeared before the crime committee, promised Sanford $5000 to supply the "negative" information.

Petrucci was given an additional $500-$600, the witness said, when he threatened to "squeal." He said the money came from Miami gambler Jack Friendlander and Harry Russell, Chicago gambler alleged to have "muscled in" on the S & G syndicate.

Russell has been indicted for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer the crime committee's questions.

Patton said Friedlander told him that "wealthy oil man "Harry Sinclair was "steered" to the Golden Shores Club near Miami early this year and lost $800,000 in two nights gambling. He said Sinclair settled his debt for $500,000, and Friedlander and gambler Artie Clark paid him (Patton) $3000 to split with other deputies to avoid disturbing Golden Shores.

In another instance, he said, Eddie Petrocel, who "claims to be a brother-in-law or nephew of Frank Costello," helped him in a bid for a constable appointment in Dade County's Second District. Patton said leading gamblers urged the Governor's brother, Julian Warren, to help him get the post. He said he talked to the Governor himself, but got no promises.

Patton, who was on the Miami Beach police force before becoming a deputy sheriff, said it was a "regular practice" for bars and hotels to pay police squad cars to ignore the curfew. He said the payoffs were split with police on the beat.

Court Given A Lesson in Pinball Play

Arlington County Court yesterday echoed the jingle of a pinball machine and reflected its colored lights.

Occasion for the corner drugstore atmosphere was the trial of Sam Lano, former Prince Georges County slot machine operator, accused in Arlington of operating illegal "free play" pinball machines.

Lano's own machine, one of eight seized during police "raids" on Arlington business places, was wheeled into court where an "expert" for the prosecution showed it did give free plays.

The expert, Jack Q. Spitler, who runs amusement and pinball machines in the Arlington area himself, first removed the glass top and banged one of the pinball "bumpers" with his finger to run up a score of 1,830,000. The machine awarded him a free play.

When Spitler tried to win a free game the orthodox way, however, he failed three times.

Judge Reid agreed to continue the hearing until 1:30 p.m. today, when Lano's seven other confiscated pinball machines will be carted into County Court for a similar test.

In addition to two counts of operating "free play" machines, Lano also faces a charge of operating his business, the Arlington Music Corp, 2030 N. 16th st., without a state license.

Girl, 6, Killed By School Bus

her schoolmates, the sisters reported.

Horrified members of the group saw the bus strike the child, she said.

The bus driver, Samuel W. Marra, 35, of 7832 Eastern ave. ne., was held on a technical charge of manslaughter.

A hearing will be held in Silver Spring Police Court December 19.

The Kensington Rescue Squad was called but the child was beyond help. Her body was removed to the Warner A. Pumphrey funeral home, in Silver Spring .

The fatal accident occurred at the close of afternoon classes, shortly after her parents received their supply of Christmas picture greeting cards from the printers.

Right of FBI to Keep Data From Court Tested by Suit

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The right of the Government to withhold FBI records from a Federal court was contested yesterday before the Supreme Court.

The case involved efforts of mobster Roger (The Terrible) Touhy to get out or jail after serving 17 years of a 99-year sentence for kidnaping. He claims he was convicted on perjured testimony offered by Jake (The Barber) Factor.

Touhy sought to force the FBI to bring into court its reports on the 1933 lineup at which Factor put the finger on him. The FBI admitted that Factor recognized Touhy as the kidnaper by his voice, not by his face.

In Federal Court in Chicago last year FBI agent-in-charge George R. McSwain was sentenced to jail for contempt when he refused to produce the records. The Government offered to show them to Judge John P. Barnes to determine if they should be admitted but refused to show them to Touhy or his attorney. Barnes refused the proffer.

The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Barnes, and the Government (not a party to the case since Touhy is legally fighting his prison warden) stepped in to ask that the reverse stand. Because of a 4-4 split in the Supreme Court last April in a similar case, the Court again may not be able to offer a final ruling. That case involved FBI records in an anti-trust case.

'Verboten' on Records

Touhy's attorney, Robert B. Johnstone, said the Government "should not be permitted to put a blanket 'verboten', on its records and thus pull down an iron curtain on the processes of justice."

But Government Attorney Robert E. Erdahl argued that the Government has the absolute right of withholding records of the executive branch, that McSwain was only following orders from Attorney General Tom Clark and that the Government had even gone further than necessary in offering to let the judge decide on their use. (Clark, now a Supreme Court justice, did not sit in the case or in last year's 4-4 tie case).

Justice Robert H. Jackson, himself a former Attorney General, said he had "a great deal of sympathy" with Judge Barnes' "feeling" about not wanting to decide on use of the records unless Touhy's attorney also could see them.

When Erdahl repeated the FBI contention that informers' lives might be endangered, Jackson commented that "that's rather speculative." But he also said that FBI reports contain "direct evidence, hearsay, leads and gossip" and certainly should not generally be made public.

"Great Harm Either Way"

"Great harm can be done either way by extremes," he commented.

Justice Hugo Black suggested that perhaps "multitudinous problems" could be avoided if the high court simply ordered the FBI agent to proffer the papers to Judge Barnes without any strings attached.

The FBI in the case of Judith Coplon, Government girl charged with stealing documents for the Russians, put a similar question up to Judge Albert L. Reeves here in 1949 because the Government felt that the judge would have thrown the case out of court if the documents were not offered. Reeves subsequently permitted their admission and hundreds were made public, much to the displeasure of the FBI.

WHAT is the daughter of show people, who has spent her life traveling with parents and going to professional children's schools, apt to be like? Judging from Caryl Sutton, now singing with Ramon Ramos' band at the Carlton Congo Room, she's quite a gal—a good sport with a strong sense of humor and independence.

A mere 20 years of age, Caryl has been in front of an audience since she was 10. Then it was in a stock company, where she played heavy drama parts. Now, she says, she can't act at all—her dramatic talent just faded. But she's made up for it by having sung with three top society orchestras by the time she's 20.

Meyer Davis started her out, and then she found a place with Emil Coleman's band. Caryl has been with Ramon Ramos all of 15 days now, and she says, "He's a fabulous guy."

Other people who have worked with Ramos have said that; he's a wonderful band leader, and ideal to work with. Ramos is Mexican; he went to California in the late '20s when he finished school. An ardent violinist, he happened to play for two friends, Xavier Cugat and Carlos Malina. They were just forming a band, and he opened with them at the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles.

Soon afterward a polo accident put an end to violin playing for Ramos, so he took up guitar. His career continued uninterrupted, and he has since played leading hotels from New York to California. He has also accompanied such stars as Morton Downey, the DeMarcos, Phil Regan and Carl Brisson.

The Ramon Ramos orchestra is a society outfit, with an added dash and zest that comes from its South American numbers. Ramos is always happiest when he's playing a samba, rhumba or la raspa. You can tell it by the light in his eye as he watches the dancers. Whatever the nationality, however, his music is always smooth and not too loud.

THE LECUONA Cuban boys are still at the Wardman Park Caribar Room, and will probably stay there until Daryl Harpa comes back. Their specialty is floor shows stressing the "exotic, fiery" aspects of Cuban lore. For this they have Leona Machado, rhumba girl who has replaced cute little Carmencita Garcia, who left to travel with her husband on Xavier Cugat's tour.

Leona Machado has performed at the National Casino in Havana, the Squire Club in Montreal, Leon and Eddie's in New York, the Sevilla Biltmore in Havana and in many theaters.

Prince Georges Board Attends To Routine

The Prince Georges County Commissioners spent yesterday in routine tasks as they completed their last full session before going out of office.

At noon next Tuesday, the incumbent Democrats will retire in favor of the recently elected Republicans.

Yesterday the Commission dissolved the College Park Special Improvement District on recommendation of County Comptroller Carl Mace, who pointed out that the community is now an incorporated town.

Housebreaking Call Turns Up Five Suspects

Three Fourteenth Precinct policemen started out at 8:30 p. m. Monday on a housebreaking call and wound up at 5 a. m. Tuesday with five suspects on two different sets of charges.

The police, Corpl. Joseph Frye and Pvts. Rudolph S. King and George E. Murray, stopped first at 224 49th st. ne., on a housebreaking report. There they arrested Francis D. Taylor, 27, of 40 Bryant st. nw. Then they arrested a man they described as Taylor's "lookout," Frederick Manago, 25, of 718 Kenilworth ave. ne.

At precinct headquarters, Taylor admitted a housebreaking on November 25 at 4609 E. Capitol st. as well as breaking into a house at 51 47th st. se. on November 17 and stealing a television set.

Police said Taylor told them he had sold the set to Mrs. Florine Pogue, 47, of 1418 D st. se., and Charles A. Fenwick, 36, of 2116 First st. nw. Both said they had sold it to Mrs. Pogue's sister, Mrs. Ethel Dorsey, 50, of 1343 Randolph st. ne.

Police then went to see Mrs. Dorsey, who told them she didn't have the television set and invited them to search her house.

It was 5 a. m. and a roomer in Mrs. Dorsey's house heard the conversation. "If you police will just go away," police said he shouted, "I'll tell you where I think that TV set is."

Police at his direction, said they found the set under a pile of debris under the back porch.

They took all five persons before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. Taylor was arraigned on three charges of housebreaking and held in $3000 bond; Manago, on one housebreaking charge, in $500 bond. Mrs. Rogue and Fenwick were charged with receiving stolen property. Their bond was set at $1000 each.

Mrs. Dorsey also was charged with receiving stolen property and bond set at $300. The cases of all five were continued until december 7.

Trust Trial Of 17 Banking Firms Begins

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Government accused 17 leading Wall Street investment banking concerns today of refusing to compete against each other in the purchase and sale of stock and bond issues.

The firms went on trial before Federal Judge Harold R. Medina on charges of antitrust law violations. The Investment Bankers Association of America also is a defendant. There is no jury in the case.

Prosecutor Henry V. Stebbins, special assistant to the Attorney General, told the court the Government expected to require four months to present its case.

The Government filed charges against the bankers on October 30, 1947. The case is regarded as one of the largest and most important in the history of the antitrust laws.

Stebbins told the court the 17 defendants represent the major portion of the investment banking business. The Government seeks a court order forbidding them from serving as directors of industries whose stocks or bonds they handle.

Stebbins told the court the defendants agree not to take accounts away from one another.

Defendants are:

Kuhn Loeb & Co.; Morgan Stanley & Co.; Eastman, Dillon & Co.; Kidder, Peabody & Co.; Goldman, Sachs & Co.; Lehman Bros.; Smith, Barney & Co.; Glore, Forgan & Co.; White Weld & Co.; Drexel & Co.; The First Boston Corp.; Dillon, Read & Co., Inc.; Blyth & Co., Inc.; Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc.; Stone & Webster Securities Corp.; Harris, Hall & Co., Inc., and Union Securities Corp.

The trial was adjourned until Thursday.

5 Churchmen Plead Guilty Of Treason

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 28 (AP).—Five of nine accused Roman Catholic churchmen had pleaded guilty of treason and espionage at the end of the second day of their trial here today.

The fifth to do so was Dr. Antonin Mandl, 37, former secretary of Catholic Action, a lay organization, and director of its pastoral center in Prague.

Dr. Jaroslav Novak, presiding judge of the seven-member state court in Pankrac Prison, asked Dr. Mandl if he considered himself guilty of the crimes of which he was accused.

Dr. Mandl said "I feel guilty."

Others to enter guilty pleas today were Dr. Otaker Svec, 62, the Pope's prelate and metropolitan tenant at St. Vitus Cathedral, and Dr. Jan Boukal, 44, first secretary of Archbishop Josef Beran.

Bishop Stanislav Zela, 47, vicar general of the Moravian archdiocese of Olomouc, testified yesterday he was "deeply sorry" for work he had done against the Communist-led Czechoslovak government, and Dr. Josef Cihak, 70, archdeacon of the metropolitan chapter of St. Vitus Cathedral, told the court he felt guilty.

Red Cross Seeks $85 Million for '51 Defense Needs

The Red Cross plans to raise 85 million dollars in 1951 to meet increased defense needs, Gen. George C. Marshall, retiring president, said yesterday.

The goal figure was 18 million dollars over the current year's campaign goal and six million dollars over the year's operating budget, the Red Cross said. During the fiscal year beginning July 1, the Red Cross actually plans to spend 10 million dollars more than it hopes to raise. The difference will be made up from wartime oversubscriptions as it was last year, the Red Cross said.

The increase in the budget, he said, is necessary because the mounting military strength has made new demands on the Red Cross. In addition, civil defense commitments require the organization to train 20 million persons in first aid, instruct hundreds of thousands in home nursing and as nurse's aides, he reported.

The campaign, which begins March 1 and lasts for one month, will be headed by Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff.

16-Year-Old Doughboy Sent Home From War

TOKYO, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Army hustled a 16-year-old doughboy from the Manchurian border back toward his Kentucky schoolroom tonight.

"A fine thing," he snorted. "They catch up with me after the whole border campaign is over."

He is Pfc. Lewis R. Norman of Hopkinsville, Ky. As he stepped from a plane in Tokyo, he said he didn't know who tipped the Army about his age. Norman will be 17 January 17.

Stalled Land Agency

As Washington's low-rent housing program goes into the site-purchase stage, new emphasis is centered upon the Redevelopment Land Agency. The National Capital Housing Authority announced last week that the District Commissioners have now approved six outlying sites and three inlying locations for the 4000 low-rent dwellings it proposes to build with the aid of Public Housing Administration funds. Fortunately, the slum sites selected for redevelopment in the southwest, southeast and northwest areas are also within general neighborhoods now approved for redevelopment by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. This makes it feasible to coordinate the NCHA operations with those of the Redevelopment Land Agency if the latter gets into operation in time to make land available to the NCHA.

The NCHA has authority to purchase its own sites, but there are several reasons why it should rely upon the Land Agency for sites if that is feasible. The Land Agency has power to write down the cost of land taken over in blighted areas to its use value; the NCHA does not. Unless the NCHA is able to take advantage of such a write-down, it may not be able to acquire land in the worst slum areas of the District at prices that it is permitted to pay. It seems obviously desirable, moreover, that these inlying projects be located in larger areas designated for redevelopment —in part by private capital.

The difficulty is that the Land Agency is not yet in full-fledged operation, and is not likely to be until its members select an executive director. Federal funds for the agency have been earmarked, and it could doubtless draw upon these funds within a few days if it had an executive director to start the wheels rolling. It is understood that the agency is checking the qualifications of several applicants for the executive directorship, and of course the selection of a vigorous, experienced planner who will know how to direct the program when he is named is of great importance. With the NCHA program in its present stage, however, prompt action is also of the essence.

Crisis In Korea

The optimism which effused last Friday over the start of the United Nations "end of the war" offensive has been turned to gloom by the serious reverses which our troops have sustained at the hands of the Chinese Communists. This newspaper is as mystified as its readers must be over the way the debacle came about. Tightened at-the-source censorship prevents an informed evaluation of what has happened other than the stark fact that the U. N. offensive was met with a smashing counteroffensive of 200,000 Chinese which broke the Allied line and engulfed whole South Korean divisions. Militarily it is hard to see how the result can be other than disastrous unless either the Chinese stop short or U. N. reserves which are not now evident can be brought into play.

What led MacArthur to miscalculate the Chinese intentions? As far back as the time when U. N. forces were poised on the thirty-eighth parallel, the Chinese indicated their intention to intervene if that line was crossed. Yet MacArthur is reported to have assured President Truman at Wake Island that the Chinese definitely would not come in. Obviously last week's U. N. offensive could not have been launched if MacArthur had believed he would be up against Chinese armies. Did political intelligence fail to keep pace with the military situation?

What of tactical intelligence itself? Was the known presence of large numbers of Chinese troops along the border discounted entirely? Were the Chinese prisoners who presented such a woeful picture of Chinese fighting capability perhaps "plants"? What of the vaunted superior firepower and air power of the U. N. forces? Is it ineffective against mass assault? Did MacArthur underestimate the prowess of the "orientals"?

Lest the censure of MacArthur be too extreme, it must be remembered that on the strictly tactical side his record has been superb. There have been many brilliant operations in the Korean campaign, and it is not without reason that Winston Churchill is reported to have called MacArthur the greatest tactical general of our times. Moreover, MacArthur's reported promise that troops would be home by Christmas—impossible on the face of it—seems to have been taken out of context. His formal statement was qualified.

But tactics and politics do not necessarily mix. It is where military matters have combined with political matters that MacArthur's generalship is open to question—and it is on this point that the Administration has been most reluctant to assert itself. The war is now beyond the military stage; if any irons are to be rescued from the fire it will have to be by political means at a higher level. The failure of political decisions to keep abreast of military realities is perhaps the most devastating commentary on the setback. In the meantime the only military move available in the light of the available news is a withdrawal to a position that can be stabilized so as to give the politicians a breathing spell for requisite action. Only if the Chinese will not allow such a disengagement can there be any thought given by the U. N. to the bombing of Manchurian supply centers that General MacArthur seems to want.

Pied Piper

If we don't want the Russians to determine our strategy, we must ask the question: What are the Muscovites seeking? If we can get the answer to that question, we shall discover the right line to pursue; for our line, obviously, should be just the opposite of the line which the Stalinists want us to take. In this newspaper's view—maintained since the Chinese Communists were fighting for domestic power—the Muscovites want us to get mired down in a war with China, latterly for the purpose of disarming the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. They know that in this event all western Europe would come under the Soviet sway. Their longer-run hope is that at the same time the strength of this country would be sapped. The Russians aim, in other words, at making pushovers first of western Europe and then of America without themselves firing a shot.

To this end, we are convinced, the Russians came to a desperate decision when their aggression in Korea—an aggression that was theirs and theirs alone—had been thrown back at the 38th parallel; they gave the green light to the ready and willing Chinese. How else account for the restraint that the Chinese had shown when we were battling for our life on the Pusan beachhead?

The decision marked a Soviet change. The Russians have always thought of Korea as lying within their strategical frontier. For this they fought the Japanese in 1904-5, and, even when the Japanese defeated them and took over Korea, the hope never died. It was revived by the Yalta-Cairo agreements to the point where realization seemed almost within grasp. Certainly the Russians are not anxious to see the Chinese in Korea. However, confronted with a choice of China or the United Nations, they let in the Chinese. This involved another momentous step—the restoration to the Chinese of military control in Manchuria.

Russia is acting true to form in realizing its purposes by proxy. In 1937 it got the Chinese to take on the Japanese. Later it got the Anglo-American allies to leave Japan completely powerless on the Asian mainland, then entered the war at the last minute solely to keep the Japanese powerless and fill the vacuum in Asia. Are the Russians going to be successful again? Very soon we shall know. Clearly the United Nations cannot allow the entry of the Chinese in force in Korea to pass unchallenged, and it must take action or face dissolution. The November 10 resolution calling for withdrawal of the interventionists and guaranteeing all the legitimate interests in question should be pressed in the General Assembly in the event that that resolution is vetoed in the Security Council. If the Chinese defy it, then a fresh situation will have arisen, and it must be faced not in the way the Russians want us to face it, but in the light of Russian strategy. This might be done if there were a general realization in this country that the price of command of and sovereignty over our own strategy is a willingness to come to a general settlement with Communist China.

Perhaps events have overrun statesmanship, and we may have to fight on Russian terms in a place of Russian choosing That depends a good deal on our public opinion. The tragedy is that there are so many China-firsters in our public life, including right wing Republicans and (it is said) General MacArthur, who have bemused the American people. If events can still be controlled, the counsel of wisdom would be a disengagement with the Chinese, and a supreme effort by Mr. Lie to discover the lines of a general settlement with the Chinese with retirement to a guaranteed Yalu as the prerequisite.

Blue-Pencil Freedom

The president of the Motion Picture Association of America, Mr. Eric Johnston, made an effective speech the other day to a convention of the Inland Daily Press Association in Chicago, protesting against what he called "Blue-pencil Freedom." His target was the censorship over motion pictures exercised in seven States and about 200 localities by police authorities. This censorship of motion pictures, he said, "is a censorship of personal liberty—a curtailment of individual choice—a damnable, stupid insult to the intelligence of the moviegoer. It is part of the nibbling at our fundamental freedoms that's all too prevalent today."

"We think," Mr. Johnston told his audience, "that if peoples can be trusted to read what they like, and to say what they like, they can also be trusted in their choice of films or in stations on the dial." And he made a point that should have been self-evident to representatives of the newspaper press, that "no medium of expression is entirely safe in its liberty when any other medium is not." This is thoroughly sound doctrine. And it derived extra force from the particular incident which Mr. Johnston chose to illustrate it—the banning in Marshall, Tex., of a film titled Pinky, the story of a light-skinned Negro girl who was educated as a white girl in the North, graduated as a trained nurse and then went South to live with her grandmother.

Mr. Johnston believes that we ought to "root out censorship in free America, so the rest of the world will know that America is truly free, and not just blue-pencil free." Well, the way to root it out is to challenge it, as the manager of the Paramount Theater in Marshall, Tex., did by exhibiting Pinky, standing trial in a local court, paying a fine and appealing to a higher court. Perhaps the movies will win a greater measure of freedom through this challenge. We hope so. They have lost their freedom, in part, because they have for so long submitted to censorship supinely. Mr. Eric Johnston himself, for example, made no audible protest when, in 1947, the House Committee on Un-American Activities undertook to tell the members of his powerful industry what kind of picture they should produce and what kind of director they should retain in their employ. Nevertheless, we welcome the belated stiffening of his spine.

Pulling Together

In the face of the appalling news from Korea, the name-calling and emotional outbursts in which legislators and public officials have been indulging so freely since election day appear to have subsided. The meetings of Secretary Acheson with the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees yesterday are described as harmonious. At least for the time being the gravity of the international situation has centered attention upon ways and means of meeting the new threat. It is a sad commentary that only the gravest sort of emergency can turn some of our public men from bickering and vilification to a statesmanlike appraisal of the perils in which the free world is involved.

There is a good deal of truth in Senator Connally's complaint on Monday that the Republicans have been doing nothing but "reexamining, complaining and growling." Senators Millikin, Wherry and Taft stand high on the list of offenders. But Senator Connally, who is chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, certainly did not improve matters with his outburst about Republican demands in which he said, "To hell with all that." Nor did he minimize the need for bipartisan cooperation by calling for "an American foreign policy." An "American" policy would obviously be one on which the two major parties are in basic agreement.

What the present situation demands, as Mr. James Reston has pointed out in The New York Times, is emphasis on the things that unite us in the conduct of foreign policy instead of the things that divide us. Apparently Secretary Acheson went to Congress in that spirit and got a favorable response. In our opinion, the technique needs still wider application. The new crisis looming out of Asia calls for a White House conference in which the President can take the leaders of both parties into his confidence, give them a broad understanding of the hazards of the situation, and call upon them as patriotic citizens to pull forward instead of dragging their feet or throwing brickbats. And of course the Administration will have to set the example and lead the way.

Statehood On Merit

An air of unreality pervades the Senate discussion of statehood for Hawaii and Alaska. It is apparent that the consideration in the minds of some—though not all—Southern Senators is not whether these two Territories are qualified, but whether their admission as States would upset the balance of power in Congress on civil rights. Supporters of the two bills are confident that if the question were put to a vote both bills would pass. Now that the bills have finally been brought up, for a filibuster to thwart the hopes of people who have waited so long would indeed be a frustration of the democratic process.

This newspaper has examined at length most of the arguments for and against statehood. Some respectable objections have been raised, for example, to the inclusion of noncontiguous Territories and to the fact that Alaska has a small—though growing—population. We feel that these objections are overridden by the fact that Hawaii and Alaska meet virtually every other test and that they have long been promised statehood; by their demonstrated ability to govern themselves in the best American tradition; by the testimony of military leaders that statehood would strengthen national defense; and by the importance of a gesture at this critical time of enlightened American policy toward dependent areas.

No sure assessment of political alliances can be made in advance. Strictly on practical grounds, if one or two Senators can still carry through a filibuster, how could four new ones affect the situation? Especially in view of the importance of these two areas to defense, we ask Senators to look, not at sectional interest, but at the national interest and allow statehood to be judged on its merits.

WINTER BEARING

Beneath the moon the orchard quickened.
A pollen drifting from the north
Set blossom on the barren stock
And strangely it brought forth.

Stiller than smoke this bloom, than stone,
Without a stoic bird to house
Amid the flowers set so softly
On the staccato boughs.

No repetition of a cycle
This graft upon familiar root,
Outside of time and for no purpose,
The cold prismatic fruit.

"Wives And Taxes"

In your issue of November 13, in the editorial "Wives And Taxes," you reported me as having said, in an address in New York, that "everything a husband gives to his wife is free of gift tax . . ." I wish you would be kind enough to correct this in some way so that your readers are not misled. The 1948 tax law amended the gift tax rules so that one half of everything one gives a spouse is free of gift tax—but it is one half and not everything. I don't know where the misquote originated, but (1) I do not want to stand misquoted, and (2) some of your readers may get into tax trouble unless they are informed of the error.

Milk Producers

The average milk settling price to the farmer for his milk on a 98 barn score, and a 99 cattle score, based on a 4 percent butterfat, was $6.27 per hundredweight for the year 1948. This same grade milk for 1949 was settled on the average for the year of $5.68 per hundredweight. For the year 1950, through October, the settled price for the same quality milk was $5.39.

While the cost of operating these farms has increased in this period about 16 percent, the milk delivered from these same farms has declined about 14 percent. While the distributors' spread has increased over the same period of time to meet increased costs, the farmers are actually getting approximately $1.86 a hundredweight less for their milk than they were in the year 1948. How the farmers on this market can stay in business under these conditions is something that most farmers cannot understand.

Remember this, too—that the laborers who handle the milk after it is received at the dairy are on approximately a 45-hour week, whereas the laborers who produce this milk are on a 65 to 70-hour week. In most cases, this labor, on the farm, is very unhappy, and something will have to be done sooner or later.

If the capital city of the United States wishes to receive the same quality milk as it has in the past years, the farmer's price will certainly have to be improved.

Milk can be no better than its production at the farm level without proper inspections. I do not think, and never have thought, that the regulations imposed by the District Health Department or the District inspectors have been unreasonable, and the proof of these inspectors and requirements is that Washington has the finest quality milk of any city in the United States.

John H. Fahey

You are to be commended on the tribute which you paid on November 21 to John H. Fahey. Mr. Fahey contributed so much to the national public welfare that his contribution to the local scene are easily overlooked. To fill this gap, we would like to point out Mr. Fahey's service for a number of important institutions serving the public in the Washington area.

There is Group Health Association, for example. Now the Nation's leading cooperative medical and hospital service plan, providing care for some 20,000 Washington area residents, GHA was started in the Home Owners Loan Corporation when Mr. Fahey was HOLC chairman. The fact that voluntary prepayment medical plans were a novelty in those days, sure to arouse the antagonism of the defenders of the status quo, did not deter Mr. Fahey from encouraging his employes to set up the plan, nor from convincing his board that HOLC should invest $40,000 in GHA, as an investment in the health of its employes.

Greenbelt Consumer Services, notably successful cooperative operating all the commercial services in the Government-built town of Greenbelt, Md., is another example. As a director of Consumer Distribution Corporation, a million-dollar-fund set up by Edward A. Filene to help start cooperatives, Mr. Fahey played an important role in the $50,000 loan which made it possible for the Greenbelt people to operate their community stores as a cooperative.

Then there is the Shirlington Cooperative Department Store, in the Shirlington Business Center in Arlington—the Nation's first cooperative department store. Mr. Fahey's influence as a director of two million-dollar Filene endowment funds was an important factor in enlisting their support for a new experiment in securing the wider distribution of goods and services—Mr. Filene's basic objective. By its successful operation, the Shirlington store is proving the soundness of this experiment.

Every cooperative in the Washington area has benefitted directly or indirectly from Mr. Fahey's interest in promoting the public welfare. The 40,000 Washington residents served by these cooperatives, like the million Americans whose homes he saved through the HOLC, have profited from the vision and the public spirit of this great citizen.

Health Risk Insurance

I read with intrest Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly's letter of November 15 in your column, proposing that Congress should "underwrite a national health security" insurance fund of nearly 4½ billion dollars annually, to indemnify all Americans for the costs of "hospitalized child-bearing, catastrophic illness and malignant disease."

I am not sure whether the doctor's figures and polices are entirely right, but I certainly am gratified that a fellow of the American Medical Association should offer a national health insurance plan. I am sure that many other doctors of standing do not follow the negative and obstructive policies of the official leaders of the AMA.

Baptist Convention

I was amazed and perplexed to read in The Washington Post of November 22 of the "unprecedented fight on the floor" at the Baptist convention regarding the election of the president for the ensuing term. I happened to be a delegate to that convention and present and voting at that particular meeting.

The voting was in connection with the two candidates—each an outstanding, highly respected Christian gentleman. Several of the delegates spoke favoring either one or the other. I can assure you there was not even a raised voice during the voting period.

I think such reporting is an offense to the public in general and to the Baptists of Washington in particular and your paper should at least offer an apology and retraction. MRS. N. R. STREET.

Congressional Reapportionment

Ten years ago Congress adopted a new method of apportionment claimed by its advocates to be "fairer" than the method which it superseded. They claimed specifically that the new method "tends to equalize the size of congressional districts."

In this claim, if the following argument is sound, they were mistaken. The real purpose and the result of the change was to give Arkansas and the majority party a seat for 10 years which would otherwise have gone to Michigan and probably to the minority party. Under such conditions those who preferred the older method on technical grounds had little chance of a hearing.

Today the situation is reversed. If Congress should return to the earlier method it would give a seat to California, which, under the present method, will go to Kansas. So the question arises again, which method secures a closer approach to equality in the population of congressional districts?

It is unfortunate and unnecessary to frame the argument, as has often been done, in terms of two competing States, A and B. The 48 States fall into two groups according to whether their population is above or below the average, and the results of different methods differ only in the number of seats the method apportions to one or the other of these groups.

Methods are of three kinds. Two are extreme, and the others form an intermediate group which includes both of those now calling for examination. Under 1950 conditions, there are 16 transferable seats, all of which are distributed by one extreme method among large States and by the other extreme method among small States.

If all these seats should be distributed next winter among the large States, the average district population in that group would be less by nearly 24,000 than it would be among the small States. But if all these seats should be distributed among the small States, the average district population in those States would be less by nearly 32,000 than it would be among the large. The results of all intermediate methods lie between these two extremes.

If now we ask, which of the two intermediate methods between which Congress is likely to choose secures a closer approach to equality in the population of congressional districts, the following results appear. Under the present method of equal proportions, which will give Kansas 6 seats and California 30, the difference between the average district population in the two groups of States is 10,450. This method thus secures a much closer approach to equality than either of the extreme methods. But if Congress should return to the earlier method of major fractions, giving California 31 seats and Kansas 5, the difference between the district population in the two groups would fall from 10,450 to 6885.

The 1940 figures point to a similar conclusion. If the method of major fractions had then been retained, the difference would have been 3489, while by changing to the method of equal proportions, the difference was raised to 6837.

These results are typical, not exceptional; under 9 out of the 17 sets of census figures the results of the two intermediate methods agree, but in each of the eight cases in which they disagree, the method of major fractions yields better results and the average of their eight departures from equality is less than half that yielded by the present method of equal proportions.

Thus, technical arguments now support, instead of running counter to, the political or partisan ones, and both point to a return to the method of major fractions—because the results of that method, wherever they have differed from those of the method of equal proportions, have departed less than half as far from the ideal but mathematically unattainable goal of complete equality in the average population of congressional districts.

Wedding Boom By-Product

By Malvina Lindsay

Second Careers

INCREASINGLY one meets the young married couple that is planning ahead for the time when the children are older or have flown the nest. Father is staying home with the offspring one night a week or more, while mother "takes a course." Or she may pursue a hobby or study at home or do volunteer work in some line related to her talents in order to keep her "hand in."

She doesn't want to be "on the shelf" a little later, she explains. Besides, there may be increasing strain on the family budget when the children are ready for higher education.

Recent reports from two colleges indicate this is part of a developing pattern in family life and in education. Radcliffe College is now conducting an experiment in "Intellectual Retooling" for 85 middle-aged matrons who have come back to school for 16 weeks. The course is designed to "refresh their discipline in thinking" and help them to be more effective in whatever second career they want to pursue, voluntary or paid.

If the present marriage mood of college women continues, second schooling is likely to become an accepted part of the educational system. And Vassar girls at least are out in the open for husbands. Ninety-five percent of them want to be married and have children before they are 30, a recently completed year-long survey of the college's "social climate" shows.

ONE-THIRD of the students said they hoped to be married within two years after graduation. Twenty-three percent were engaged by the middle of their senior year. Yet—a large majority wanted to be active in community affairs later in life, and one-third wanted to resume work after their children were grown.

What a change in marriage attitudes, or at least the expression of them, from those voiced by the long-skirted, pompadoured college graduates of the early part of the century. Then careers were the big subject in future plans—no matter what secret intentions or wistful yearnings to the contrary were harbored.

And periodically there was an outbreak of the discussion in print or on platform of careers versus marriage for women, also the warnings and lamentations that only about half of the women college graduates were marrying, that college man and woman had only one and a fraction children and were failing to replace themselves.

To this college authorities were replying that their women graduates married and reproduced on about the same scale as others in their economic class and that their contribution in offspring made up in quality what it lacked in quantity.

WHATEVER may have been true, one thing was certain—marriage aspirations among college women generally were bootlegged. Seldom did a girl announce her hope, let alone her determination to marry and have children. The gloved hand of the nineteenth century genteel female rested restrainingly upon her, while at the same time the widespread zeal and excitement over the "new woman," who was achieving things in man's world, fired her professional ambitions.

But early in the 1930's home economics teachers began to notice that students were no longer explaining their choice of subject by saying they were going to do demonstration or research work, but were saying frankly they wanted to fit themselves for marriage and homemaking. In the 1940's surveys of both college and noncollege women showed similar outspoken aspirations—and determination—for marriage and children.

The upsurge of the birth rate among women with high school and college education during the years from 1942 to 1947 showed these ambitions were being realized. For the first time in many years these groups were replacing themselves and their husbands in the population. And the general marriage boom made the nation generally bearish on spinsters.

The war, the draft, a boom economy, all these entered into this picture. But a change in social attitudes and psychological mood also had its effect. The Vassar study shows how this was built up. It also foreshadows more education on the installment plan for the different periods of women's lives—and of men's as well, as the age for retirement is pushed up.

Priests In Hospitals

I have a few facts to add to the letter published November 25 on priests in armed service hospitals. I occupied a room immediately below the late James Forrestal's at Bethesda Naval Hospital while he was there and for almost a year thereafter.

At Bethesda Naval Hospital the chaplains have full access to the entire hospital including even the operating rooms. Upon my own entry, after a near-fatal plane crash, I received the last sacraments of the Catholic Church immediately and received daily visits from the Catholic priests (two of them) for the remainder of my stay. I was visited almost daily by various ones of the Protestant chaplains. I was and still am "an unknown," a noncelebrity.

The final undeniable fact is that each and every patient at Bethesda Naval Hospital is afforded every possible opportunity for spiritual solace. It is only by a patient's own request that all chaplains are included in a "no visitors" restrictions.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

More Babies, More Wolves

AFTER his customary initial reaction of rather cocky defiance, President Truman seems to have settled glumly down to face the post-election facts. At least this is the natural inference from a reliable report that the President will no longer press for the two great, symbolic measures of the Fair Deal—the Brannan farm plan and the Ewing health plan.

If Truman had not himself announced that he would continue to fight for his entire Fair Deal program, without abating one jot or one tittle, the abandonment of the Brannan and Ewing plans would have no great meaning. After all, they proved to be such obvious political poison that even the most ardent and official Fair Deal senatorial candidates, like Lucas in Illinois, Loveland in Iowa, and Campbell in Indiana, had declared against them before election day. Thus no one needs to worry whether the Brannan and Ewing plans will be enacted.

The President's decision not to press for these plans is vitally important, nonetheless, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

IN BRIEF, there is only one way for the President to save his foreign and defense program, and this is to upset the new balance in Congress established by the November 7 voting. And this is so, in turn, because Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio now commands a potential majority of the Senate which, if solidified, he can use to cut the American foreign and defense policy to ribbons.

This potential Taft majority is composed of three elements. First, there are the habitually isolationist, right-wing Republicans, whose representation in the Senate has been heavily increased by the victories of such men as Welcker of Idaho. Second, there are the relatively moderate Republicans like Hickenloper of Iowa, who will now tend to follow Taft because they think his political line has been proved good medicine at the polls. Third, there are the Southern Democrats, who will also tend to follow Taft because they are innately conservative and hate Truman more and more with every passing day.

In tackling this formidable array of enemies, sworn and potential, Truman can ignore the isolationist, right-wing Republicans. Nothing can be done with them. But much can still be done with the Republican moderates, if Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson is sacrificed, and another man like former ECA Chief Paul Hoffman is named Secretary of State.

As to the Southern Democrats, nothing much can be done with the two or three like Senator Harry F. Byrd, who actually went to Ohio during the campaign to proclaim his affection and admiration for Senator Taft. But much can certainly be done with the Southern rank and file if the President is also willing to sacrifice the items on the Fair Deal program the Southerners dislike the most.

Unfortunately, however, the sacrifice of the Brannan and Ewing plans is mere hors d'oeuvres, a mere commencement of the oblation, in the view of these Southerners. What they really want is to see Truman sacrifice most of his civil rights measures. Such leaders as the two influential Georgia Senators, Walter George and Richard Russell, have sworn they will be satisfied with nothing less.

Dropping Acheson and putting civil rights temporarily on the shelf will produce a changed congressional situation, in which enough of our foreign and defense policy can survive so that this Nation can survive. It may be very unfortunate; in the case of Acheson, it is surely grossly unjust, that the babies should have to be thrown to the wolves in this manner. But the important thing now, as suggested in the last report in this space, is to get the sleigh out of the woods. The practical facts of the congressional situation in effect demand that the President should forget what is distasteful, or unpleasant, or even by most tests wrong, and proceed to do what is expedient.

Luckily there are a good many men around Truman, and among these several of the most ordinarily ardent Fair Dealers, who see the problem in precisely this light. Expedient action to regain control of Congress has already been urged upon Truman. It will continue to be urged upon him.

Barring the Yugoslav aid bill, the present special session is of course, no more than an interlude. But if the President has not faced and acted upon the practical facts by January 3, when the new Congress assembles, it will be time to expect the worst. Many congressional acts of blind folly and willful ignorance will then be inevitable. And in the present world situation, even one such act will be enough to shatter the whole Western alliance against Soviet aggression.

Sabotage Manuals Found in 'Sardines'

over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the existence and full meaning of the pamphlets became known. Detailed study revealed the complete list of titles in the sardine-can sabotage library, known as the "Small Sport Collection."

Other Sports Titles

Beside the manual on "futbol," which gave instructions for the sabotage of electrical facilities and the manufacture and use of incendiary borbs, there were similar booklets of "official regulations" on hockey ("hockey"), boxing ("boxeo"), tennis ("tennis"), ball ("pelota"), and basketball ("Baloncesta").

Here were professional details on how to short circuit electrical lines to cripple an important plant; how to burn up vital transformers by tapping their oil supplies; how to make vicious delayed-action "Molotov cocktails" to wreak destruction; how to place hidden detonating charges in the desk of "a citizen in whom we are interested in causing harm or death;" how to mix sugar and common chemicals into little hat-band bombs whose delayed action will shatter a victim's head; how to murder by stealth, ignite fires without being detected, batter a turbine into uselessness, cripple bottleneck machinery with emery dust, sulphuric acid or ordinary gasoline; how to cut bridge trusses with home-made explosives, blow down telephone lines: in short, a complete catalog of sabotage methods and techniques to blast the productive heart and war potential of a nation behind its lines.

Explosives In "Hockey"

The hockey manual, published, like the others, by the "National Council of Sports," dealt with the manufacture and use of explosives and fuses. "Boxeo" gave additional data on fuses, explosives, caps and detonating devices. "Tennis" contained further material on construction of charges, bombs and incendiary grenades. "Pelota," or game of ball, covered electric ignition systems, the sabotage of batteries and dynamos, and the destruction of aviation pumps and guns. "Baloncesta" detailed the sabotage of telephone and telegraph lines, and blasting of central exchanges.

Besides the sabotage manuals, the sardine cans contained ideological directives, all similarly disguised. One of them, published by "Herboristeria Moderna," or Modern Herb Shop, was titled "25 curas por las plantas"—literally translated "25 cures by the plants."

But immediately following its dummy title page was a frontispiece of Stalin, and inside an address delivered by Stalin on February 9, 1946, to the voters of his Moscow constituency. He reported on World War II, and outlined the causes of what he called "the brutal breakup of the equilibrium within the world capitalistic system;" as a result of which, he said, the world from time to time "is split into two enemy camps, and war begins between them."

Redivision of Markets

Perhaps, he added, war could be avoided by periodic redivision of world markets "by mutual agreement," but such agreements, Stalin said, are "impossible to realize under the present capitalistic conditions of the development of world economy."

Other Communist tracts and pamphlets included in the cans furnished an unmistakeable ideological basis for the instructions of physical sabotage.

During the tracing of the sardine-can papers, crewmen of the vessel related that one of their shipmates, an avowed Communist, had continually tried to stir dissention between officers and crew members. Furthermore, it was learned that the voyage immediately preceding the one on which the sabotage booklets were discovered, he had held a meeting in Italy with two known Italian Communist party leaders. It was believed that this crewman surreptitiously smuggled the cans on the ship in Italy.

Discovery of the sardine-can library is a significant one.

It must obviously be considered that the consignment of "sardine" cans may have been destined also for South America or Spain. On this point, however, the FBI declined to elaborate.

How to Destroy Transformer

Random excerpts from the manuals are representative of the theme of the entire "sports" library. "The "futbol" booklet, on how to sabotage low and high tension lines, transformers and central electrical headquarters, says, for example:

"The most sensitive part of the transformers is the deposit of oil in the cylinders. The aim thus is to destroy these deposits, since lacking oil, if the transformer functions, it will burn. An opening, easy to enter, leads to the oil deposit, where we will place a charge of one or two kilos of primary dynamite, according to the quantity of the deposit, which will be enough in order to completely destroy the transformer."

A second section deals with "construction of bottles and incendiary media," under chapter headings including: "Impact Incendiary Bottles;" "Delayed Incendiary Bottles;" "Small Incendiary Apparatus for Personnel Attacks," and "Some Simple Procedures to Provoke or Produce Fires."

To a nation exposed to military aggression all around its far-flung defense perimeter the sardine-can rules for the "sport" of subversive warfare pose a perplexing question. How secure is America? How adequate are the Nation's internal defenses to prevent or to quell an intensive outbreak of subversive warfare within our own borders, which Government officials agree is certain to accompany or even to precede an open war with Russia?

Threat Must Be Unmasked

There is, on the one hand, a threat that must be unmasked and clearly defined. The question of sabotage of American industry and productive facilities in the event of open war is "no longer a sleeping matter," operatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have already been told. They have been warned that "the Russians have excellent, exact information that will be of inestimable value to them if the time ever comes when they want to order their Communist agents in America to strike an open blow at our industries."

The discovery of the sardine can documents emphasizes the threat. On the other hand, there is the question of what to do about it; how best to strengthen the vast, disordered machinery for the detection and prevention of subversive warfare, and how to invoke countermeasures which should be taken for self defense.

Boggle to Avoid Noted In Sabotage Manual

Communist sabotage instructions are astonishingly complete.

For instance, the "football" manual, which tells how to knock out power lines, points out one boggle which almost any amateur might take.

Problem: If, in blowing up a high tension tower, explosive charges are placed equidistant from the ground on all four legs and exploded simultaneously, the disappointed saboteur may find that the tower merely drops vertically a few feet and remains upright.

Solution: place the charges one meter from the ground on one side of the tower, and three meters up on the other.

Result: tower will come down, high tension line will be knocked out.

Method of Smashing Power Lines Noted

Here are a few excerpts from the "small sports manual," a booklet of detailed sabotage instructions:

"Low tension lines . . . let us take a rope of sufficient length which will permit us to reach, by throwing it, the height of the cables; we will attach a rock to one end, and throw the rope over the cables; we will later pull the rope in such a manner that the cables will be joined, thus forming a spark which will cause the short circuit . . .

"Central electric headquarters—For the destruction of these objectives, let us attack the dynamo, placing charges inside of them in the event that they are stopped, for which reason we will open the register which is found in the upper part of the dynamo, or its shaft, joined to the plungers.

"These charges will vary according to the importance of the dynamo, and there must be placed there, as a minimum, one kilo of primary dynamite . . .

"Some simple procedures to provoke or produce fires—One of these consists in attaching, like daisy leaves, many wax matches to the end of a piece of Bickford fuse. (See figure). . . "The heads of the matches will be pointed in the direction of the point of the fuse to which they are attached. This apparatus will rest or repose over papers, straw, dry branches, or products dampened with gasoline, oil, or other inflammable materials."

Exchange Slated

Greek Envoy Approved by Yugoslavia

ATHENS, Nov. 28 (AP).—Premier Sophocles Venizelos announced tonight that full diplomatic relations had been restored between Greece and neighboring Yugoslavia with the exchange of diplomatic representatives.

Venizelos announced that the agreement "undoubtedly constitutes a big step forward towards a general understanding between the two countries and the promotion of their relations."

He said Yugoslavia had agreed to Greece's nomination of Spyros Kapetanides as her representative in Belgrade. He did not say who the new Yugoslav minister in Athens would be. Kapetanides was formerly charge d'affaires in Madrid, and more recently headed the American and Far Eastern affairs section of the Greek Foreign office.

The exchange of ministers ends a virtual two-year shutdown of relations. During the Greek civil war, Greece accused Marshal Tito's Communist regime of aiding the Greek Red guerillas. Although relations were not formally broken off, both countries closed down their missions in the respective capitals.

In the meantime, reliable Greek sources reported that Russian officers were training Greek guerilla parachute troops in Bulgaria as part of a general Bulgarian military buildup pointed at Greece and Turkey.

Hearings Begin Today On Yugoslav Aid

The Administration asked Congress yesterday for 38 million dollars for emergency food aid for starvation-threatened Yugoslavia.

Acting Chairman James P. Richards (D., S. C.) announced that the House Foreign Affairs Committee will begin hearing on the request today. Assistant Secretary of State George W. Perkins will be the first witness.

Leftist Unions To Develop 'Collaboration'

Some 10 left-wing unions, expelled from the CIO during the past year, plan to undertake joint action in the future, but will not form a third labor federation to rival the CIO and AFL.

That's the word from Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's Union and often spokesman for labor's extreme left wing. Bridges passed the word in making the principal address before a conference of the 10 unions held at Turner's Arena yesterday.

Instead of federation, Bridges called for collaborations by the leadership of the left-wing unions and collaboration of efforts. Yesterday's conference, attended by several hundred delegates, was an example of such collaboration.

The delegates heard speakers, and passed resolutions demanding wage increases, rollback of prices, rent controls, repeal of the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act, repeal of the McCarran anti-Communist act, repeal of the Magnuson merchant marine loyalty act, adoption of the excess profits tax, enactment of fair employment practices legislation.

Danny Petro Loses $50 Forfeit to the Law

Boxer Danny Petro forfeited $50 in Municipal Court yesterday in his latest bout with the law. Petro was charged with disorderly conduct after a brawl Friday night in the Little Tavern Shop, 655 Pennsylvania ave. se.

But Petro is due in Municipal Court again Friday on another charge of assaulting a hotel clerk November 5 and robbing him of $210. The clerk, Hayden O. Evans, has since been charged with embezzling rent payments from tenants in the Chastleton Hotel, where he was employed.

War Turn Cuts Politicking

the nation responsible," Soviet Russia, if the Chinese Communist attack is pressed.

George said the war development changed not only the legislative outlook but "the whole world situation." He said it would make it "much easier" to pass an excess profit tax bill through both the House and Senate.

Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.), ranking Republican member of George's Senate Finance Committee, said he agreed the Korean war turn "puts new steam behind the tax bill and all real defense measures."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate Interior Affairs Committee, opened Senate debate on the Alaskan bill with a plea for approval of both Alaska and Hawaii statehood as "defense" measures.

"The case for statehood is simple and direct," O'Mahoney told the Senate. "It is the complete answer to Soviet propaganda. The Pacific is now the center of world politics. The issue is whether the people of that area and the people of all the world are to enjoy self-government or to be condemned to live under a totalitarian dictatorship."

Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), one of the two lead-off speakers against statehood, took the position that statehood would "weaken our defense" and that Congress should give right of way to tax, rent control, and foreign policy measures instead.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), leader of the Senate's Southern bloc, interrupted Stennis to say this is no time to place Alaska in the hands of "an untried state government . . . at the very moment when we are threatened with attack."

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) argued that neither Alaska nor Hawaii is ready for statehood.

Earlier, 14 Southern Senators caucused on statehood and civil rights issues. Russell told newsmen Southern Senators were not unanimous against statehood, but a majority of them opposed it, "some very strongly."

The Dixie caucus spent most of its time mapping Eighty-second Congress anti-civil rights strategy. Russell suggested the "climate" may be ripe for a civil rights compromise next session. He said Southerners have offered to compromise the civil rights issue before via the constitutional amendment route, but their offers have been flatly rejected.

Here is what happened at a round of party policy conferences:

The Senate Republican Policy committee declined to take a party stand on statehood or on any of the other Truman measures scheduled for short session action. Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who recently favored an early adjournment, said the Korean war turn may keep Congress in session right through the Christmas holidays. Taft said he personally was inclined to favor statehood for Hawaii but opposes it for Alaska.

The Senate Democratic Policy committee met to consider ways of expediting the Administration's program. But Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said: "We talked mostly about the war." Lucas said the war could "very well" keep members in continuous session until the new Congress convenes January 3.

The House Republican policy committee met to consider the proposed $4 billion excess profits tax bill, but reached no final decision. House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), said another meeting will be called "to make our position clear when the bill reaches the floor for debate." The House Ways and Means Committee plans to report a tax bill this week-end.

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S

Since Winston Churchill and General Eisenhower have turned out to be enthusiastic and surprisingly competent amateur artists, it seems that a new renaissance of painting by the common man is going on in this country. Certainly, there is an astonishing amount of interest in art in general, as evidenced by the wide publication and sale of books on the subject. Here are a few of the best . . .

ITALIAN PAINTING ($15.00) is a history, with lavish full-color reproductions, of Italian painting from the Middle Ages to Botticelli. Printed in Europe, the superb prints and authoritative text fill a deep need for a really complete work on the creators of the Renaissance . . .

An important American contribution to art publishing is ART NEWS ANNUAL, 1951 ($2.50), which surveys American painters and American art events. There are, in addition, penetrating articles on Toulouse-Lautrec (currently enjoying an American vogue) and Goya. The survey is illustrated with 100 black and white and 40 full-color reproductions. Browse through it at Brentano's.

INDIAN ART OF THE AMERICAS ($15.00) is a full panorama of the American Indian's contribution to world art. For the first time in a single volume, the masterpieces created by our original natives are displayed. There are 79 full color plates which will quite frankly, amaze you if your ideas about Indian culture have been derived from Hollywood . . .

Although not strictly an art book, THE DWELLINGS OF COLONIAL AMERICA ($10.00) shows how the diverse building traditions of several Old World cultures adapted themselves to create the American Colonial house. With hundreds of intriguing photographs and an urbane text, it lovingly illustrates the beauties of our most distinctive architectural achievement.

Security Bank Ups Pay, Votes Bonus of 6%

By S. Oliver Goodman

Santa came early to stockholders and employes of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank.

All officers and employes received a bonus of 6 percent of annual salary, President F. G. Addison, jr., announced yesterday, adding that "substantial" pay increases also were granted to many officers and all employes, effective December 1.

Directors of the institution, whose main office is at 9th and G sts. nw., declared a year-end special dividend of 2 per cent, payable December 22 to stock of record December 15. This brings total dividends for 1950 to 12 percent, as compared with 10 percent last year.

In addition, President Addison pointed out, a stock dividend of 1 share for each 15 shares was paid in February.

Also announced was the retirement of Fred McKee as first vice president of Security Bank because of illness. His resignation as an officer is effective as of January 1, but he will remain as a director.

McKee has been an officer and director since Security Bank was organized in 1913 and in accepting his resignation the board expressed deep appreciation for his services and counsel during nearly four decades.

ANTE BOOSTED: Safeway Stores, Inc., is in the midst of a five-year, 1000-store expansion program. Originally, the chain estimated that each store would cost about $150,000. Now, the company finds the cost per store will average about $200,000 because of higher building costs and the need for larger space.

JOINS BANK: Hubbert R. Quinter has been appointed manager of the real estate department of the National Metropolitan Bank. Quinter, a veteran of 35 years in the real estate and insurance business here, was president of the Real Estate Mortgage & Guaranty Corp. since 1945. The latter firm is in liquidation, having paid a handsome first dividend to stockholders last August. For many years, Quinter was manager of the insurance department of the H. L. Rust Co. A native of Washington, he is a graduate of the Georgetown University Law School.

NET DOUBLES: Southern Railway Co. yesterday reported net income of $14,867,267 for the first 10 months, as compared with $7,537,263 in same 1949 period. October net of $2,204,407 contrasted with $493,642 in like 1949 month. President Ernest E. Norris announced that the road is ordering 100 additional Diesel locomotive units to expedite movement of an increasing volume of national defense traffic in its area.

BACKLOG: Thompson-Starrett Co., Inc. has a backlog of more than 19 million dollars in construction contracts, stockholders were told at the annual meeting. J. R. Van Raalte, newly elected president, presided for the first time. Leon P. O'Connor, formerly with Pan American Airways, was elected a vice president and general manager of foreign operations. James A. Boeri was elected treasurer and Joseph D. McGoldrick was made chairman of the executive committee. A substantial, if not controlling, stock interest in Thompson-Starrett, is owned by the Wolfson group of Washington.

NEW CHAPTER: Representatives of leading Government departments and private business here have been invited to meet tonight in the Roger Smith Hotel to discuss formation of a local chapter of the Systems and Procedures Association of America. J. G. Nagro of New York, first vice president of the national group, will discuss objectives which include promotion of better scientific management through analysis of systems and procedures on a national scale.

ODD LOTS: Stockholders of Philco Corp. approved a two-for-one stock splitup, effective December 1. . . . The Washington office of the Birmingham Manufacturing Overseas Corp. reported it is shipping two mobile (bus) dental units to Uruguay on order from the military mission there. . . . Allied Public Relations Associations, Inc., which has an office here, has opened a new office in Beverly Hills, Calif. . . . National Airlines reported net income of $1,797,199 for first 10 months, against $177,589 in same 1949 period. . . . Container Corp. plans to split stock two for one.

EARNINGS: Federated Department Stores, Inc., reported net income of $18,219,759 or $6.44 a share for the 52 weeks ended October 28, against $13,937,401 or $4.95 a share in the preceding year. Other earnings statements:

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 (AP).—Grains opened strong on unfavorable war news today, and then ran into profit cashing at the Board of Trade. Although the selling at attractive prices reduced advances a closing rally helped.

Soybeans were independently strong and resisted the mid-season decline in grains. Traders said war news was the dominating factor in the trading, although some export business developed.

Trading was fairly active all day and at the close wheat was unchanged to 1 cent higher; corn was ⅛ to ½ higher; oats were ⅛ to ⅜ higher; rye was ½ to 1 cent higher; soybeans were 4 to 5¼ higher, and lard was 18 to 35 cents a hundredweight higher.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The cotton futures moved over a wide range in erratic trading today with final prices $1.70 a bale lower to 75 cents higher. The growing seriousness over the Korean situation created nervousness among traders. Considerable profit taking developed on prospects of a tight cotton supply next spring. Hedge selling added to the pressure.

Culmone Shut Out, Fails on 6 Favorites at Bowie

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special:

THE TALKING power of Tom Yawkey's kind of cash was demonstrated the other day when Lou Boudreau disclosed that he had chosen to work for the Boston Red Sox. While other teams—the White Sox, Nats and Yankees—were cooing their offers into the ear of Boudreau, Yawkey thumped down with a $60,000 ante that won him.

From the beginning, the Red Sox were the favorites in the bidding. Yawkey's league is too rich for the White Sox and Nats. The Yankees could contest with him, but Yawkey has always been faster with a buck than the New York organization.

POVICH

A factor with Boudreau, no doubt, was his own managerial ambitions. Some day he hopes to boss another major league club. The White Sox, with a new manager in Paul Richards, are set for a period of years. Bucky Harris is a fixture with Clark Griffith, and Casey Stengel is the pet of Yankee Owner Del Webb. At Boston, Steve O'Neill has a mere one-year contract and got the job last season as a stop-gap manager.

THE ACQUISITION of Boudreau by the Red Sox leaves either Vern Stephens or Johnny Pesky available for trading. General Manager Joe Cronin, who outbid his father-in-law for Boudreau, might yet deal one of them off to Clark Griffith for the proper consideration, which, in the view of the Red Sox, would be a first-line pitcher.

The Red Sox need pitching so badly they can taste another pennant-race disappointment if they don't come up with one. Mickey Harris or Sid Hudson would probably be acceptable in any shuffle for Stephens or Pesky.

Griffith is keeping an ear cocked for any Boston offer that would include Pesky. That young man who moved to third base for the Red Sox would solve the Nats' shortstop troubles. The Nats rate him above Stephens despite Pesky's lack of power. And Stephens' power has never manifested itself in Griffith Stadium. Of the 178 homers he has hit in nine seasons, only one was in the Washington park, and that was an inside-the-park swat.

•THOSE BOWL COMMITTEES had scarcely come out of their huddles to announce their New Year's Day games when the overlords of football betting, whose habitat is Minneapolis, had some announcements of their own. They announced:

Michigan vs. California in the Rose Bowl is a pick-'em game, meaning it's even money; Texas is a seven-point favorite over Tennessee in the Cotton Bowl; Oklahoma is a 6½-point favorite over Kentucky in the Sugar Bowl; Miami U. one point over Clemson in the Orange Bowl.

A bit of other incidental intelligence from Minneapolis confirms that Texas A. & M. is favored by seven points over Georgia in the Presidential Cup game, and that you can have Navy and 20 points against Army on Saturday at Philadelphia.

CHARLIE JUSTICE unblushingly admitted at the Touchdown Club the other night while addressing an alumni group of former F. B. I. agents that it is tougher to run in the pro league. "My own case is pretty good proof," he confessed, "and Doak Walker is drawing the same conclusion, I guess.

"Walker was a great runner in college, and now he is leading the league in touchdown scoring, but I notice that he hasn't scored on the ground yet. Every one of his touchdowns has been with a pass."

Justice took issue all over again with Army Coach Earl Blaik who said the colleges played the harder football and that they pursued the plays more enthusiastically than the pros. "I doubt that," said Justice. "I was never caught from behind in college in my life. But in the pro league I was caught in Philadelphia by a 210-pound end. He wasn't loafing, no matter what Blaik says."

THERE will be an unholy howl from Austin, Tex., if the All-America selectors don't take note of Bud McFadin, the Bunyanesque guard of Texas U., who has been splitting the opposition wide open on both offense and defense all season.

Before he made good at Texas, McFadin was the most widely-sought schoolboy lineman in the State's history. The little town of Iraan (1000 population) was infested with college talent scouts until Texas landed him. McFadin apparently likes the choice he made. When asked why he had chosen the State University, he said: "I like the grub here; they feed you pretty good."

He's a six-foot-four, 240-pound character, who when once asked about his defensive play, modestly said: "Aw, shucks, I just run in there and grab an armful of them guys and then peel 'em off, and the one that's got the ball, I keep."

Coveted Army-Navy Trips

Winchester Woman Wins Contest, Gives Prize to Vets

A DOCTOR'S WIFE in Winchester, Va., won The Washington Post's final Pick-the-Winners contest and generously is turning over her coveted Army-Navy prize to two Purple Heart veterans of Korea.

In a fabulous week of upsets, Mrs. Marguerite Clement, 15 S. Stewart st., Winchester, missed only the California-Stanford tie and Duke's victory over North Carolina.

Mrs. Clement cooly selected Cornell over Penn.; William and Mary over N. C. State; Northwestern over Illinois; Michigan over Ohio State, and Baylor over Southern Methodist, among others.

How did she do it? Let her laughingly describe it. Said Mrs. Clement, "I've been trying unsuccessfully all season to win your contest. This being the last week, I thought I'd just stop studying the teams so hard and throw out past-performance dope."

It worked. Closest to her were 10 runnersup who all had four games wrong. Thown out of the contest were the Colgate-Rutgers cancellation and the Penn State-Pitt postponement.

Mrs. Clement's husband is Dr. William J. Clement. They have a 2½-year-old daughter, Mary Jane.

In that both Dr. and Mrs. Clement are graduates of the University of Virginia, they have other plans for this coming Saturday. Imbued with the Cavalier spirit, they just can't miss the North Carolina-Virginia game at Charlottesville.

So Mrs. Clement suggested that The Washington Post give her tickets and all-expense trip for two to the Army-Navy classic at Philadelphia to two wounded veterans of Korea at Walter Reed.

The two lucky boys will be selected probably by raffle, with the help of the Red Cross.

Runnersup who missed four games to Mrs. Clement's two include:

David Muller, 2641 Connecticut ave. nw.; Arthur J. Purvis, 6002 Springfield dr. nw.; Francis S. Liles, 1801 16th st. nw; Paul C. Humphrey, 135 Wesmond dr., Alexandria; Paul F. Shaffer, 1206 N. Pitt, Alexandria; Richard Dominelli, 2628 Kirkwood pl., Hyattsville, Md.; Esther Brockman, 808 Jackson ave., Takoma Park, Md.; Herbert H. Hill, 3710 40th pl., Cottage City, Md.; Frank Spendley, 712 Colonial ave., Norfolk, Va.; H. W. Penske, 1014 Circle dr., Schenectady, N. Y.

Grudge Match At Arena Tonight

A grudge match and a two-man team battle are scheduled on a four-event wrestling show at Turner's Arena tonight. Laverne Baxter and Natie Brown, who traded blows in an unscheduled fight last week when Natie was refereeing, will tangle in a co-feature set for 60 minutes.

The other half of the twin bill matches Roland Meeker and Tony Martinelli.

Ace Freeman and Francois McQuet pair off in the team contest against Les Ruffin and Chick Garibaldi, while a special 30-minute event lists Capt. Ruffy Silverstein against Black Jack Dillon.

Palica Rejected

BROOKLYN, Nov. 28 (AP).—Erv. Palica, crack 22-year-old Brooklyn pitcher, has been turned down by the Army because of high blood pressure.

Bums Make It Official: Dressen Is New Manager

By Joe Reichler

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP).—A 4-year-old promise was fulfilled today when Charley (Chuck) Dressen was transported clear across the country—from Oakland to Brooklyn—to manage the Dodgers in 1951.

Dressen, a former Flatbush third base coach under Leo Durocher, succeeds grizzled Burt Shotton, who until as late as 10 days ago was the No. 1 choice to return to the helm.

In announcing the signing of the 52-year-old Dressen, President Walter O'Malley told a press conference he was simply fulfilling a promise he made to Chuck back in '46.

"When Chuck left us for a similar job with the Yankees," O'Malley related, "I did my best to stop him. When I realized I could do nothing about keeping him in Brooklyn, I told him I'd get him back when I was in position to."

O'Malley said first contact was made with Dressen a week ago today. Until then, he said, he was prepared to go along with Shotton for another year, at least.

"I wasn't ready to count Burt out at any time," O'Malley added. "I kept the door open for him right to the very end. It was only when I had every reason to believe that Shotton could not be available that I turned in another direction."

Except to say he knew that Shotton and Branch Rickey, erstwhile Brooklyn president now with Pittsburgh, were on a hunting trip together, O'Malley declined to clarify his statement. This was interpreted by some to mean that Shotton may join the Pirates in some capacity. Shotton won two pennants in three full seasons as Brooklyn boss.

"Shotton has been asked to remain in the Brooklyn organization in some capacity," O'Malley added. "He can choose his position. We hope to talk with him at the St. Petersburg, Fla., meetings next week."

Bob Tessier Dies, California Coach

BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Robert Tessier, line coach of the University of California football team and former All-Southeastern Conference tackle at Tulane University, died today after a heart attack.

Tessier, 38, died a few hours after entering Alta Bates Hospital. He had gone to the hospital after complaining of severe neck pains.

Reds Drop Mancuso, Cuccinello to Stay

CINCINNATI, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds let one coach go today and got word that another has decided to stay with them instead of going to the Cleveland Indians.

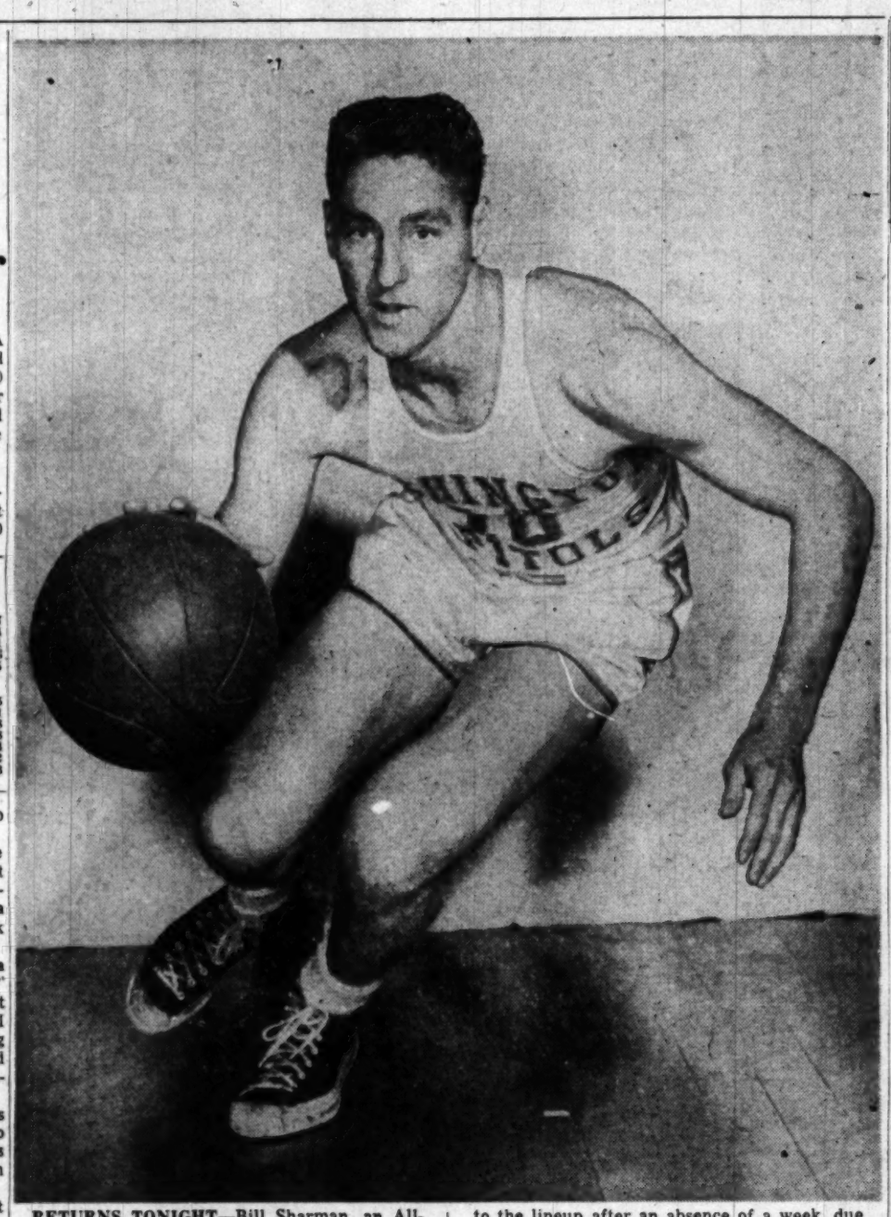
Dropped from the coaching roster was Gus Mancuso, former major league catcher. Tony Cuccinello, a Redleg coach for the lost two seasons, notified Redleg officials that he would be back for 1951.

Here's Solution For Harvard's Football Problem

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 28 (AP). — City Councilor Thomas McNamara suggests Harvard might win a few football games if its students expended as much energy on the playing field "as they do in harassing citizens and police."

The suggestion was made last night while the city council considered assessing students for damage done during football celebrations last week.

McNamara also proposed that Harvard put every student in the stadium and "let them play a game of Donnybrook. The 11 men still standing afterward would be the football team."



RETURNS TONIGHT—Bill Sharman, an All-American at Southern California last year, will give the Caps an urgently needed lift against Rochester tonight at Uline Arena by returning to the lineup after an absence of a week, due to an injured ankle. Sharman stands 6-2, weighs 180, and has a 10-point average although he has been used sparingly

Title-Winning W. & L. Lands In Gator Bowl

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 28 (AP).—Washington and Lee, 1950 football champion of the Southern Conference, was named tonight to play in the Gator Bowl game here January 1.

An opponent will be named tomorrow. It probably will be Wyoming, Tulsa, Nebraska or Wake Forest, all considered by the committee.

In Denver the Rocky Mountain News said it would be Wyoming and the selection would be announced tomorrow.

Washington and Lee won six straight games to edge Orange Bowl-bound Clemson for the Southern Conference title. The Generals finished with an 8-2 season record. Tennessee beat Washington and Lee, 27-20, and Virginia did it, 26-21.

Ranked eighteenth in the final Associated Press poll of the season, Washington and Lee operates from the split-T formation. Coach George Barclay, All-America guard at North Carolina in 1934, is in his second year as head man at Washington and Lee.

It is the second time the Southern Conference champion comes to the Gator Bowl. Clemson won the Conference crown in 1948 and beat Missouri in the 1949 Gator Bowl game.

Baseball's Dr. Hyland In Serious Condition

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28 (U.P.)—Dr. Robert F. Hyland, well-known baseball physician and surgeon, was in serious condition with a stomach hemorrhage in St. John's Hospital today, attendants reported.

Oklahoma Beats Out Army

Wilkinson's Leftovers Are AP's No. 1 Team

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP).—Coach Bud Wilkinson, who expected his graduation-riddled Oklahoma team to get its lumps this year, wound up instead with the Nation's No. 1 football team for 1950.

The Sugar Bowl-bound Sooners were ranked tops in the final Associated Press poll of the season, with Army's all-conquering Cadets a distant second.

Third place was awarded to Texas, beaten only by Oklahoma, 14-13. The Longhorns were followed by 4—Tennessee; 5—California; 6—Princeton; 7—Kentucky; 8—Michigan State; 9—Michigan, and 10—Clemson.

Wilkinson lost his entire first line and three of his starting backs after last year's eventful campaign. All he had to remind him of his past glory was Fullback Leon Heath, a good reminder though. If anyone had mentioned a No. 1 ranking and a Sugar Bowl berth to Wilkinson, the coach would have sent the person the Optimists' Club medal.

But the youthful mentor did a masterful rebuilding job, ran the Sooners' winning streak to 30 straight games, and gained a lucrative Sugar Bowl shot for the third straight year. The 30-string includes the bowl wins over North Carolina and Louisiana State.

The New Orleans extravaganza will send the No. 1 team against the No. 7 club—Kentucky. The Cotton Bowl winds up with another topnotch pairing—Texas, No. 3, vs. Tennessee, No. 4.

Pasadena's Rose Bowl also will have two of the first ten in action—California, No. 5, vs. Michigan, No. 9. The Miami Orange Bowl pairs Clemson, No. 10, against Miami, No. 15.

A total of 319 sportswriters and sportscasters from coast to coast took part in the final balloting and 213 named Oklahoma as their No. 1 choice.

It was a sad year for the Irish, who were named as the team most likely to succeed this year in a preseason oll. The thrice-beaten Notre Damers didn't even make the top 20. It was the first time in a decade they didn't rate a berth in the first 10.

Christopher May Play Again After Heart Operation

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28 (AP). There is a slim possibility that former major league pitcher Russ Christopher may be able to play baseball again as the result of a heart operation.

Christopher, a relief ace for the Philadelphia Athletics and Cleveland Indians, was forced to give up baseball after the 1948 season because of a heart ailment. The microvalve of his heart mechanism was damaged by childhood rheumatic fever.

The lanky righthander is convalescing at Jefferson Hospital, where the two-hour operation was performed last Friday. The surgeon who performed the operation asked that his name be withheld but he said Russ will be able to "lead a normal life" once fully recovered.

Tough Foe in Brion

Louis Makes Another Comeback Try Tonight

By Charles Dunkley

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 (AP).—Joe Louis, former heavyweight champion, who didn't quit when he was ahead, will try to make it from behind tomorrow night when he renews a projected ring comeback against a foe 13 years younger.

The once-feared Brown Bomber, now 36, will battle the Argentine heavyweight, Cesar Brion, in a Chicago Stadium bout scheduled to go 10 rounds or less.

Although a 4-1 betting favorite, there were strong suspicions that Louis may have picked too rough a trial horse for his second comeback try.

Louis was soundly defeated last September 27 by Champion Ezzard Charles in a 15-round title bout at New York. Tomorrow night's bout will be Louis' first start since he was pummeled by Charles and announced for the second time he was retiring.

The Bomber, whose tawny fists once were so potent, has not looked impressive in training sessions for this engagement. He hopes to go into the ring at 215 pounds, three lighter than against Charles.

Brion, at 194, will spot Louis some 21 pounds, but at 23 the South American has that great equalizer, youth, in his favor.

Both Louis and Brion predicted a knockout victory.

"I'm going to shoot for a knockout from the very start," Louis said. "I'm going to throw as many right-hand punches as possible. One of them is sure to land."

Hymie Wallman, manager of Brion, predicts a quick knockout for the South American fighter, who has won 31 out of 34 bouts.

Brion is a stand-up fighter, lacking skillful boxing ability and a devastating punch. He wades in without caution and has won his last four engagements. His main achievement was a second-round knockout of Tami Mauriello in 1949.

Explaining his comeback attempt, Louis said: "I believe my bad showing against Charles was due to the fact I had an off night. I'll find out for sure tomorrow night."

The inference was that Louis definitely will quit the ring if he fails to knock out Brion.

Louis' purse, a 37½ slice of the net gate at the televised and broadcast bout, may be his smallest in a regular bout. He'll probably get about $9000. Some of his exhibitions two years ago paid him better. Both fighters will get $1000 each from the radio-television fee. Joe's percentage alone from the television-radio take in the Charles fight was around $40,000 which may top tomorrow night's gross gate.

Miffed Students 'Hang' Director For Mich. Loss

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 28. (U.P.).—Richard Larkins, Ohio State University athletic director, realized today that his decision to play Saturday's snowbound football game with Michigan won't be forgotten for some time.

Yesterday, Larkins was hanged in effigy near the OSU campus by 500 yelling and snowball-throwing students.

Only the appearance of University President Howard L. Bevis stopped the demonstration. Michigan defeated Ohio State, 9-3.

Caps Lose 10th Straight To Rochester

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The Washington Caps had neither the speed nor the marksmanship to cope with the Rochester Royals here tonight and lost an 87-71 National Basketball Association game.

It was the fourth straight loss for Washington and their tenth in a row over a two-year span to the Royals.

Only the presence of hustling little Freddie Scolari saved the Caps from an early rout. Scolari gave the crowd of 2000 a real show as he hit with deadly accuracy in the first quarter, sinking five out of five tries.

Freddie ran his string to six in a row before he missed in the second quarter. He finished with 17 points, high man for the game.

Scolari's first period burst gave the visitors a 20-19 advantage at the quarter, and in the early minutes of the second period he boosted the Washington lead to 24-21. But the Royals responded with 11 consecutive points, and the Caps got no closer than seven points thereafter.

Knicks Beat Syracuse; Warriors Topple Celtics

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP).—The New York Knickerbockers rolled to an easy 108-84 victory over the Syracuse Nats tonight.

In the opener the Philadelphia Warriors snapped a first-place deadlock in the Eastern Division with Boston by edging the Celtics,

Joe's Backers Bet $78,539; Best He Does Is Four 2ds

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Nov. 28—Swaggering Joe Culmone of yesterday was dragging Joe Culmone today as the "Saucy Sicilian" was shut out in eight attempts to reach the winner's circle.

Willie Shoemaker wasn't around to profit by the setbacks of Culmone, having flown out of Washington eight winners behind his Eastern rival, with the score 350-342 in the duel for national jockey honors.

Culmone's backers took a licking throughout today's program. They put $78,539 into the tote windows to win on the cocky lad's mounts, and then watched it slide down the drain.

Six times on the eight-race card, they installed him the favorite, and they showed they stuck with him to the last, betting $19,256 on Coming On in the day's finale in an effort to recover some of the losses.

The best Culmone could do was finish second for the fourth time of the afternoon. His Coming On, a 4-year-old bowed to Witch Sir, a $13.40 shot, in the final drive. This was Nick Shuk's second winner of the day.

After yesterday's big Shoemaker-Culmone show, both the attendance and betting dropped off considerably. A crowd of 4217 bet $512,456.

Culmone rode hard today and apparently had good mounts but victory just wouldn't come his way. If he rated his mount along in front, something invariably popped up to beat him. If he rated his horse, the animal just didn't have sufficient stamina to get up in the final drive.

In addition to Shuk, Culmone

Biffle, Early Named to Laurel Board

LAUREL, Md., Nov. 28 (AP). The Secretary of the Senate, two former ambassadors and a one-time Undersecretary of Defense are on the new eight-man board of directors of Laurel Race Track.

The makeup of the board was announced today by Morris Schapiro, Baltimore businessman, who took over a controlling interest in the track yesterday.

His son, John D. Schapiro, new Laurel president, heads a board which includes Stephen Early, Leslie Biffle, James Bruce, Breckenridge Long, C. E. Tuttle, J. M. Willis and Morris Schapiro.

Early, a one-time top assistant to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, resgined recently as Undersecretary of Defense. He is now vice president of the Pullman Company.

Biffle is Secretary of the Senate and staff director of the Democratic Senate Policy Committee.

James Bruce, a native Marylander and a nationally known banker and industrialist, is former United States Ambassador to Argentina.

Breckenridge Long, former Ambassador to Italy, has long been identified with Maryland horse racing and breeding.

Willis is head of the Bethlehem Steel Company's Shipbuilding Division. Tuttle, a retired industrialist, is also a member of the Maryland Jockey Club's board of

17 Juveniles Will Contest $7500 Stake

BOWIE, Nov. 17.—Juveniles, 17 of them, are scheduled to contest the mile and a sixteenth distance of the Bowie Breeders' Stake here today.

Joe Tucci's Bob Considine, a budding candidate for the 1951 Kentucky Derby, is probable favorite in the $7500 added event, but the colt will have some strong opposition from C. Ewing Tuttle's Tenure and Alan T. Clarke's Senator Joe.

These three horses probably will gain the bulk of the public's mutuel backing since, on past performance records, they appear to outclass the others in the large field.

Bob Considine is after his second straight stake success here, having won the Endurance Handicap from the disqualified Bold on Thanksgiving Day. Bob Considine finished three-parts of a length behind Brookmeade Stable's Bold but was moved up to first position after his rider, R. J. Martin, complained to the stewards that Bold had impeded his mount.

Shoemaker Wins 2

HOLLYWOOD PARK, Calif., Nov. 28.—After a disastrous trip East to Bowie Racetrack Monday, Jockey Willie Shoemaker came back to ride two winners here today and gain on the Nation's leading winner, Joe Culmone, who was blanked. He now trails Culmone by six victories, 350-344.

had his troubles today with Darrell Hartley, a young Canadian, and Don Mitchell. Both apprentices rode two winners.

Hartley won the day's feature, the Charles Purse, aboard H. A. Kimball's Algasir, a $4.20 favorite. The youngster kept the son of Sir Gallahad 3d going to take the main money by a nose margin from D. K. Kerr, jr.'s Flying Weather.

Culmone was second with Transhot in the first race, Hartley rode Nanby Pass, paying $16.60, home in front to start a $45.60 payoff on the daily double (3 and 9), completed when Apprentice Donald Mitchell scored with Moose Pone, a $5.40 shot in the second race. This time, Culmone was third.

Joe was second again in the third on Win My Way as a longshot, Dance Routine, at $43.20, came along to beat him in the stretch drive. In the fourth race, Culmone was fourth on Swing Sword with Jimmy Lynch winning on Byja Copo at $17.20.

Joe was a bridesmaid again in the fifth. This time Shuk shook up Infirst and kept the $3.60 horse going to down Culmone aboard Donna Boorse. He couldn't get Dot Beiltro anywhere to speak of in the sixth, which went to Mitchell on King Chatter for this youngster's second winner of the day.

The curly-headed Joe was out of the money in the featured seventh before coming back to lose the day's finale, after having the favorite out in front by upwards of five lengths at one stage.

Yesterday it was "good time Culmone." Today it was "better time other jockeys."

Dear Folks At Bowie

Owner-Trainer Eugene Jacobs said he could have asked Willie Shoemaker to claim a foul after Colonel Mike lost to Culmone and Blue Hills in Monday's seventh race. However, he did not want to louse up the show and is not so sure Shoemaker would have carried a complaint to the Stewards. The officials however, have warned Joe about both carrying horses out and throwing his whip in the faces of the on-coming horses. This trick, which I have referred to many times, is one at which Culmone is a past master. He apparently waves the stick in his own mount's eye but he slips a wide slash back so fast only a person looking for the move can note it. One trainer told me his horse came back with welts on his face after finishing second to Cocky Joe. See you on the rail.

Quantico Loaded With Basketball Talent

Terps' Millikan Gloomy Over Opener Tonight

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

IF THE UNIVERSITY of Maryland's brand new basketball coach, Bud Millikan, is pessimistic about his debut in the big time tonight, nobody can blame him a bit.

The Terps have a rugged evening's work cut out for them as they journey to Quantico, Va., to match baskets with the classy Quantico Marines.

The calling of Leatherneck reserves to active duty has loaded the Virginia Marine Corps team with basketball stars. Heading the cast of Corps characters is ex-All American and ex-Washington Cap star Jack Nichols, a tiny lad who stands 6-8 in his stocking feet.

Also on the Marine team are Elmo Stephenson, former University of Richmond ace, and Frank Alagia of Georgetown. In its opening game Monday night Quantico slaughtered Bolling Field, 80-47, Stephenson had 23 points and Nichols 16.

Millikan's starting five will include three juniors and two sophomores. Only two, Lee Brawley and Dick Koffenberger, were letter winners last year.

"We're small, slow, and green," said Millikan. "I saw Quantico play against Bolling Field and against their terrific team we'll probably just be taking up space on the court.

"But Maryland will gain valuable experience against the Marines that will help us in later games against college teams.

"Two sophomores, Tom Connelly and Don Moran, will start at forward. Brawley, last year's high scorer, will play center, and Koffenberger and Jim Johnson, formerly of McKinley Tech, will start at guards. Brawley and Koffenberger will have to do most of our scoring this year.

"Maryland's worst trouble is lack of height. Moran, at 6-3, is our tallest man. That's not big enough to win college games these days."

Millikan took over as basketball coach at Maryland last May after compiling an outstanding record as an assistant coach at Oklahoma A&M as a high school coach.

After graduating from Oklahoma A&M in 1942 as the smallest man on the All America team, (he's only 5-11), Millikan stayed on at his alma mater as assistant to Henry Iba. His greatest moment in basketball, Bud says, was when he helped develop the 1945 NCAA National championship team at A&M.

In 1946 and '47, Millikan went back to his home town, Maryville, Mo., to coach the high school team. The next year he went to Newton, Iowa, from where he came to the Terps. Millikan's over-all record as a coach is 88 victories and 23 losses.

4 D. C. Boys Play Tonight For Catholic

Four Washington boys will see action tonight when Catholic University opens its basketball season, meeting Towson Teachers at 8:30 p. m. at Brookland in a Mason-Dixon Conference engagement.

Scotty Cranston, set-shot star who was out of action last year while concentrating on his studies, will be in the starting line-up, pairing off with Joe Della Ratta at forward. The two are expected to supply a one-two punch strong enough to send the Teachers into defeat.

Tom (Buster) Brown, 6-foot-6 center; George Macdonald, 6-foot-2 forward, and Arell (Red) Weaver, a 6-foot-1 forward, are the other District high school graduates on the squad.

Ballston Wins Two

The Ballston Indians won two games in Arlington County Basketball League play last night at Swanson Junior High. The 105-pound Indians trounced Arlington Forest, 30-20, and the 150-pounders nosed out the Columbian Squires, 17-14.

He will be assisted by Don Reed, a veteran racing writer.

Georgia Governor Coming to Game

Gov. Herman Talmadge and other alumni of the University of Georgia will honor the Georgia football squad at a banquet the night before the Bulldogs clash with the Texas Aggies in the Presidential Cup football game December 9 at College Park. The affair will be held in the Congressional Room of the Willard Hotel.

Arrangements call for a special plane trip here by Governor Talmadge, Dr. O. D. Aderholt, Georgia's president; Dr. Harmon Caldwell, chancellor of Georgia's State colleges, and other dignitaries of the Cracker State.

Blair Receives Lions' Trophy

The Lions Clubs of Bethesda and Silver Spring awarded permanent possession of the Lions Trophy to Montgomery Blair School last night at a dinner at Kenwood Country Club. The affair was in honor of members of the Blair and Bethesda Chevy Chase High School football teams.

Blair defeated BCC, 13-6, two weeks ago for its third straight win in the series.

Hoppe Wins 3d

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28 (AP).—Willie Hoppe, veteran 63-year-old billards ace, won his third straight block, 50 to 43, today from Challenger Joe Chamaco of Mexico in the world championship three cushion billards matches.

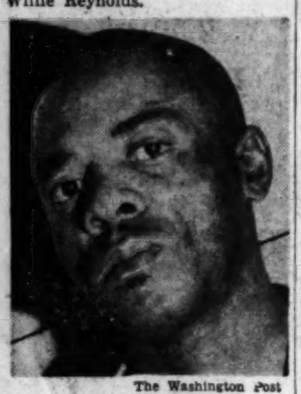
Chain Gang Escapee Held as Suspect 90 Minutes After Brutal Assault

A 42-year-old Navy Department employe was beaten and robbed in McLean Gardens yesterday afternoon by an escapee from a Georgia chain gang who knocked on her door and asked to use the telephone.

The man, arrested at his home 90 minutes after the crime, was booked by police as David Scripp, 50, a laborer, of 1518 Swann st. nw. Police said he also was known to them as David Scrivens although police said he was born Willie Reynolds.



The Washington Post
DAVID SCRIPP

Inspector Robert V. Murray, chief of detectives, said Scripp confessed to assaulting and robbing the woman about 1 p. m. in her apartment.

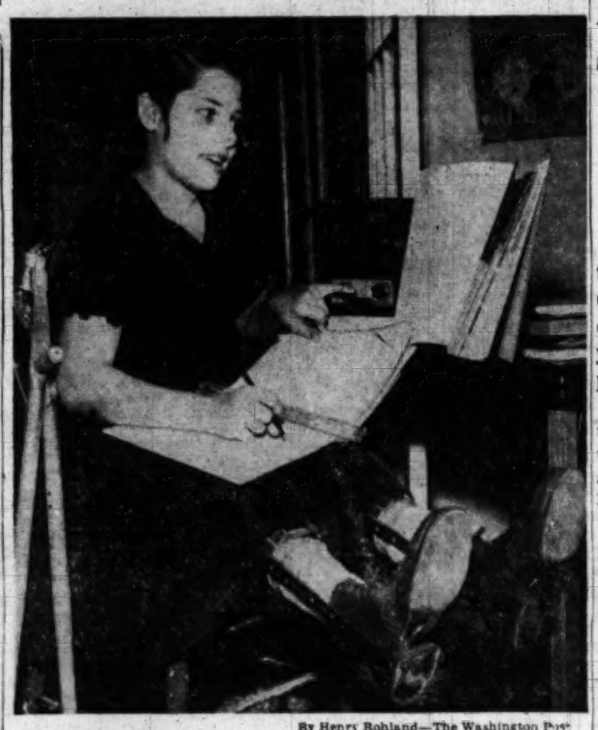
The assault victim identified her assailant at police headquarters last night, police reported.

Murray said Scripp knocked on the woman's door and told her he wanted to use her phone to call another man. As the woman went to the phone to inquire whether the man actually lived there, Scripp entered the apartment and struck her from the rear, Murray said.

Some of the woman's garments, including her underclothes, were torn from her. When she was able to scream, the assailant grabbed her billfold from her pocketbook containing $20 and ran from the house, police said.

With blood pouring from a gash on her forehead, the woman ran upstairs screaming hysterically to her neighbors for help. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital and released late yesterday afternoon.

Phone Hookup Brings School To Girl Polio Victim's Home



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post
SCHOOL DAYS AGAIN—Connie Castellanos tries out the intercommunication system she'll use today to "go" to classes

Ten-year-old Connie Castellanos admitted last night that she was just a little excited: she goes to school today for the first time since she became ill with polio four years ago.

Or rather, today school comes to Connie.

With a special two-way hookup developed by telephone engineers, Connie will be able to sit at home and listen to her fifth grade classes via a loudspeaker.

Whenever she's called on to recite or wants to ask a question, she simply presses a button, talks into an "intercom" box and she can be heard in school.

Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. has set up a private line between Connie's home, 615 Franklin st. ne., and her classroom at Brightwood School, Nicholson st., between 13th and 14th nw.

Bell Telephone Co. calls the teaching method the Home-Bound Students Service.

Connie is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Castellanos. Connie's father died in Germany in 1945. A year later, Connie was stricken with polio.

Mrs. Castellanos has three other children, Benita, 15, Mary Margaret, 11, Barta Lea, 6, and is also raising a nephew, Michael, 16.

Conveyor Blamed

Gravel Pit Accident Kills Truck Driver

A young concrete company truck driver was killed about 11 a. m. yesterday when, police said, a conveyor belt accidentally slammed him against the side of a gravel pit in Bethesda.

Mr. Byrnes

Bernard B. Byrnes, 25, of 801 Kentucky ave. se., died of head injuries. The accident occurred at the branch plant of the Maloney Concrete Co. at 4868 Bethesda ave.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death. Police said there were no witnesses to the accident.

Byrnes' 23-year-old wife, Helen, who is expecting their third child, became ill after hearing of the death.

The concrete company said Byrnes' truck was being repaired and he was helping out in the pit for the day.

Born in Washington, Byrnes attended schools here and had worked as a route driver for a laundry company. He joined the concrete company as a driver about a year ago.

Surviving besides his wife are two daughters, Linda, 3 years, and Caroline, 14 months; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard P. Byrnes of 3241 N St. n.w.; a brother and a sister.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Judge Allows Girls to Testify Without Oath

It is "legal mumbo-jumbo" to require young children to take the formal witness oath in court, Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut declared yesterday.

The District Court jurist made the ruling in a case in which sisters, 6 and 8, accused a 30-year-old coal company employe of taking indecent liberties with them. The defendant is Mercie J. Hinton of 1210 S st. nw.

The little girls admitted they had lied on previous occasions but promised to tell the truth on the witness stand. They said that the "Boogie Man" took children who lied. They did not attend church or Sunday School, they said.

Judge Schweinhaut ruled that the children qualified as witnesses even though they did not understand the formal oath.

Defense Attorney Jack Politz declared that a United States Court of Appeals opinion of more than 50 years standing required oaths of all witnesses, and that the children should be sworn.

"This may give the Court of Appeals a chance to re-examine the situation," commented the judge.

The defendant, was found guilty of the sex offense which occurred last May. Prosecuting was Assistant United States Attorney Raymond E. Baker.

Safecrackers Draw 22 years; One Charge Suspended for

Two safecrackers, sentenced in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday, drew the maximum of 22 years in prison—and one suspended sentence.

Judge John B. Gray told the two men he had suspended sentence on one count in order to be able to send them right back to prison if they were ever paroled and came into his court again.

Judge Gray told the defendants, Kermit R. Judd, jr., 26, of 517 64th ave., Capitol Heights, and Donald M. Prendergast, 36, of 500 3rd st. nw.:

"You may convince parole authorities in the future to give you another try. I am suspending sentence generally on one charge to have sanction over you in this event."

He told them that "if you ever are convicted again in this court or I learn of a conviction in another court, I will give you the maximum sentence in this case."

Judge Gray, obviously angered, tongue-lashed the pair for half an hour before sentencing them. He called them "hardboiled, professional crooks" and said their jailbreak attempt was evidence of "complete unwillingness to submit to civilized authority."

Both are parolees from Federal institutions. Prendergast said he has 7½ years "hanging over me" when he completes yesterday's sentences. Judd faces an additional six years.

The men were sentenced on charges of housebreaking and a attempted jail break.

Judd and Prendergast were convicted of breaking into the Crossroads Restaurant in Bladensburg and the Hyattsville and Cheverly Theaters last June 10. The attempted jailbreak occurred July 5 when it was discovered they had nearly completed a hole through the wall of the Marlboro Jail.

After the sentencing, Prendergast signed an affidavit in which he took the blame for a Washington housebreaking for which another man is now in jail. The affidavit allegedly clears Ernest N. White of complicity in the entering and robbing of the Standard Transfer and Storage Company here last March 24.

Slicer Gets 18 Months For Embezzlement

R. Glenn Slicer, former chief clerk of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, yesterday pleaded guilty to an indictment charging embezzlement of commission funds in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville.

He was sentenced to 18 months in the House of Correction.

Slicer, who lives at 18 Parkside rd., Silver Spring, pleaded guilty of taking approximately $3000 in commission funds over a period of a little more than a year. He told Judge Stedman Prescott that he used the money to make trips to out-of-town football games.

Defense Attorney James H. Pugh urged the court to give him a suspended sentence since the funds have been restored but Judge Prescott declared:

"County employes must realize public funds cannot be tampered with."

Slicer had been with the commission about five years.

Crime Penalty Talks Listed By House Unit

D. C. Law Enforcement Officials to Discuss Stiffening Terms

Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said yesterday the House District crime investigating committee will begin conferences next week with Washington law enforcement officials on the proposed bill for drastic stiffening of criminal penalties here.

Davis said it would be the first time the subcommittee has heard the officials' reactions to the bill. The bill is in draft form, but Davis said it will not be introduced in the House until next year.

He said the subcommittee expects to meet with judges, prosecutors, police and other officials concerned with the bill.

Some key provisions of the bill, including those for severe, mandatory minimum terms for second and third offenses in serious crime, and for special court supervision of habitual criminals, are expected to bring strong protest from court officials.

Davis annunced the forthcoming conferences after a meeting of his investigating committee yesterday. He said there is no present plan for any public hearings in this session.

For Want of a Key 3 Japanese Miss A Key to the City

Three visiting Japanese city planners who paid a courtesy call on the District Commissioners yesterday missed getting the traditional key to the city because the key to the key room couldn't be found.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young and chief coordinator of key ceremonies, was off sick, and no one else seemed to know where the key was.

After a chat with the Commissioners, the visitors set off on a day-long tour of the city to get ideas for reconstructing Japanese cities. They were: Mayor Motohide Iwami of Himeji; Eikichi Kanbayashiyama, president of the Diet Members Association of the War-torn Cities for Reconstruction; and Tamotsu Machida, chief of the reconstruction section in the Ministry of Construction.

Man Who Fled Annapolis Jail Arrested in District

Washington police yesterday turned over a fugitive from an Annapolis jail cell to Maryland State Police after they caught him trying to sell watches in Franklin Park.

The fugitive, Robert D. Tinsley, 18, of Greenville, S. C., was arrested along with his companion, Leonard W. Gudorf, 27, of Louisville, Ky. Both were turned over to Maryland authorities.

Tinsley and another Anne Arundel County prisoner, Thomas J. Green, 20, escaped from the jail last Friday by bending the cell bars with their hands.

Under questioning yesterday, police said, Tinsley admitted the jail break and said he later went to Boonetown, near Fort Meade, Md., and looted two general merchandise stores there of $1200 worth of goods. Tinsley was awaiting trial on two housebreaking charges when he escaped.

Spotted in Franklin Park at about 10 p. m. Monday by First Precinct police, Tinsley first told them his name was Adams. His identity was established by a fingerprint check with FBI files. Tinsley said Gudorf had no part in his escapades. Gudorf told police he had met Tinsley at the Greyhound Bus station here.

Police said they would let Maryland authorities question Gudorf, whom they booked on a fugitive warrant. They said Tinsley had also confessed three holdups in Baltimore.

Darden Urges South to Ease School Bars

Virginia U. Head Asks Negro Entry To Graduate Study

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 28 (AP).—President Colgate W. Darden of the University of Virginia recommended today that southern States open their graduate and professional schools to Negro as well as white students.

Darden

He suggested this in an address prepared for the Southern Governors Conference as one part of a broad program looking toward solution of the "grave (racial) problem of which we are the unwilling and unhappy heirs."

Federal Courts have already made this decision for a number of southern schools, including the University of Virginia.

He called for continuance of segregation in education at the public school level but with a genuine equality of opportunity offered to the Negro student.

"It is my suggestion that in the task of building a first-rate public school system for both races," Darden said, "The direction of the program be placed in the hands of competent men and women drawn from both races . . .

"I am not unmindful of the fact that these suggestions will arouse antagonism among those to whom all segregation is anathema and among those to whom any concession to the Negro race is regarded as both silly and reprehensible.

"But I would remind these individuals that they are dealing with stubborn facts and not shadowy theories and that a frightful price can be paid for intransigence."

Darden, Governor of Virginia for a four-year term before he took over as head of the University in 1946, said it was not difficult for him to understand the deep desire of the Negro to break down the segregation barriers in the entire public school system.

The Negro does not believe in equal but separate facilities because, while he has seen them remain separate, he has not, except in the most unusual situations, witnessed equality, Darden said.

J. Louis Monarch Elected Head Of New Montgomery Council

J. Louis Monarch, 62, Washington attorney, was elected president of the Montgomery County Council which took office yesterday at Rockville, Md.

Monarch

Monarch, who resides at 9104 Alton pkwy., Silver Spring, was nominated by Harold F. Hammond, also of Silver Spring.

Lathrop E. Smith was nominated by Mrs. Stella B. Werner for the presidency but he asked that his name be withdrawn. Smith, who was chairman of the Up-County Planning Commission, then was elected president pro tem of the council, to preside in Monarch's absence.

Mrs. Katherine J. Lawlor of Chevy Chase was named secretary of the council. Smith was named council representative on the planning council and former Councilman Thomas C. Kelley was named to replace him as a member. Kelley had been council representative.

Smith

Mrs. Lawlor

Mrs. Werner was named council representative on the Welfare Board.

George F. Nesbitt, who served as temporary chairman said that the council will rotate the office of president so that each of the four Republican members will serve a year as chairman.

Monarch announced that the council's next open session will be at 2 p. m. Tuesday and said that the council "might gradually work into elimination of closed sessions." It was learned that Mrs. Werner had urged such action at the closed session which preceded the open session.

The council adopted a resolution directing the County Commission on Youth to study public and private recreation facilities of the county and make recommendations on a county-wide recreation program.

Addison Named To Head Cancer Fund Drive

Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Security Savings and Commercial Bank, has been appointed general chairman of the District Cancer Society's 1951 fund-raising drive.

Walter S. Pratt, jr., society president, also announced that Philip A. Hanigan, jr., division commercial manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., will serve as vice chairman of the drive, scheduled to begin April 1.

With the announcements, Pratt called attention to the fact that the cancer death rate has risen from 1.28 per 1000 in 1935 to 1.60 per 1000 in 1949 and said "our efforts toward its control through education, research and service must be intensified."

'Park-at-Desk' Building Open For Occupants

"Nothing like it in the world!"

That's the way Morris Cafritz describes his "Park-at-Your-Desk" office building at 1625 I st. nw. First tenants of the 10-story 7-million-dollar structure move in this weekend.

Yesterday the real estate operator gave a preview of how things will work in the Cafritz Building. He worked every gadget himself and drove up to the top at a clip that had the reporter and photographer holding tight.

He showed how cars can enter from either K or L sts. On the main floor, the vehicle may be turned over to an attendant who will drive it up the road two-lane ramp to a floor stall near the office, or the driver may take it there himself. The ramps and spaces are in a center core of the building, so all offices have outside views.

The "park-at-your-desk" feature is within 10 feet of being literally true. Office tenants, at $20 a month extra, may rent one of the 500-car spaces, picking one on their own floor. The unrented spaces will be available for public parking.

This feature, plus such others as a penthouse promenade deck for sunning and lunching, have attracted such "blue chip" tenants as General Motors, Ford Motor Co., Western Electric Co. and Bell Aircraft Corp.

Attendants, after parking cars, will be able to make the return journey on a belt lift. Cafritz in his Homburg, striped trousers and polished shoes, crawled between the dusty railings to show how.

The unusual design of the building was the result of a perplexing problem—how to use the high-value land without wasting space in open courts needed to give offices a view. The combination office-parking plan seemed to be the answer.

Cafritz's next project may be a garden-type apartment development in southeast Washington. He's also planning some de luxe apartments, a 600-room hotel, a large office building and stores on Temple Heights.

Bars to Open At 12:01 A. M. On January 1

You won't be able to buy any hard liquor in Washington bars, restaurants and night spots this New Year's Eve because it will be Sunday.

But the District Commissioners yesterday fixed it so you can buy a few nightcaps after midnight.

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Act forbids the Sunday sale of alcoholic beverages other than beer and light wines. This can be changed only by act of Congress, an ABC Board spokesman said yesterday. But the Commissioners can regulate hours of weekday sales.

Accordingly, on request of the Hotel Association of Washington and with the indorsement of the ABC Board, the Commissioners yesterday ordered that bars may be opened for regular business from 12:01 a. m. to 2 a. m. Monday, January 1.

Chest Drive Reaches Total Of $3,209,597

Campaign Workers Hit 75 Percent of Area's $4,260,000 Goal

Washington area's Community Chest drive—advancing slowly but steadily—has reached 75.34 percent of its goal.

"Red" Feathers

At Washington Hotel report luncheons yesterday officials announced $3,209,597.71 has been pledged so far. The goal is $4,260,000.

Yesterday's total represents an advance of $167,420.15 over collections reported a week ago.

Red Feather activities at the hotel were marked by presentation of "Oscars" to about 50 Community Chest workers and talks by Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), Columnist Doris Fleeson and Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr.

Biggest chuckle of the day came when Assistant Secretary of the Army Karl R. Bendetsen awarded a Red Feather "Oscar" to Corp. Harris R. "Red" Feathers, a 20-year-old, red-haired soldier-draftsman attached to the Military District of Washington.

"Red" Feathers won Red Feather recognition for the posters he has prepared for the drive.

Senator Smith urged support of the Chest drive "at this time of crisis." The Community Chest, she said, is the "direct opposite" of communism in that the former is "the free, voluntary way of the more fortunate looking after the less fortunate in a community."

The Senator, gripping the audience by her sincerity, stressed the need for a "total mobilization of our moral forces . . . to find a basis for lasting peace."

The free peoples must look for common interests and seek to dispel "prejudice and hatred," she said.

The lady Senator added:

"The world needs more simple, old fashioned neighborly good will. We must have more tolerance. We must stop living in fear."

These pledges were reported by the Washington area Red Feather units: Government, $1,440,006, or 86 percent of its goal; Business 1, $1,160,123, or 70 percent; Business 11, $153,731, or 63 percent; Special Solicitations, $229,050 or 74 percent; Alexandria $55,936, or 69 percent; Fairfax, $31,434 or 80 percent; Arlington, $39,797 or 64 percent; Montgomery, $75,289, or 58 percent, and Prince Georges, $24,226 or 47 percent.

Mrs. Faircloth Named To Head Hospital Board

Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, a Washington attorney, was elected president of the Women's Board of National Homeopathic Hospital at the November board meeting held yesterday.

She will fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Sidney Pendexter who died earlier this month.

German Schools in U. S. Zone Held Raising 'Blind Followers'

The United States is losing by default the battle for the minds of German youth, Dr. Worth McClure, executive secretary of the American Association of School Administrators, warned last night.

"German schools in the American Zone are bringing up another generation to be blind followers," he told a dinner meeting of the National Council of Chief State School Officers in convention at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"Unless a major operation is performed on the German school system, we shall prepare there another generation that will welcome a dictator," he said. "Ironically, we are doing it with American taxpayers' money expended for the express purpose of making another dictator unacceptable.

"You cannot develop individual initiative, enterprise, and inventiveness in a classroom which serves two shifts of pupils every day and where a teacher has 50 to 70 pupils.

"There the teacher is of necessity a policeman and a crammer, and is compelled to use Prussian methods of instruction. You cannot expect to develop inquiring minds when there are few textbooks, virtually no libraries, no laboratories, no industrial art shops worthy of the name.

"Under such conditions the teacher is the only source of information. The teacher tells and the children recite. That was the old Prussian method later employed by Hitler."

Dr. McClure recommended two steps to meet this "rising threat to American security." He suggested appointment of a commission to completely overhaul the educational program.

The state school officers heard E. L. Morphet, consultant to the National Citizens Commission, describe a series of educational studies sponsored by the commission to aid citizens improve their schools. The studies will deal with financing school programs.

Lee Terms School Book Used In D. C. Pro-Socialist

Board of Education Official Wants Text On Government by Magruder Banned

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Adelbert W. Lee, school board vice president, said yesterday that a book used in District schools is slanted toward socialism and should be withdrawn immediately.

The book is "American Government" by Frank Abbott Magruder, former professor of political science at Oregon State College.

It is the standard text in the Washington high school course on American government and is used widely elsewhere in the Nation. The book is said to be on the textbook list of more than half of the Nation's high schools.

Lee said he had read the text and found it "not the type of book we should have in District schools."

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said the book would be "scrutinized line by line and page by page" and that he would make a report to the Board of Education.

The book has been used for a great many years in District schools, Dr. Corning said. Recently it was issued in a new edition in which "a number of changes were made."

Lee pointed out that the textbook was brought to his attention when it became a target of "The Educational Reviewer," a mimeographed paper published in New York City.

The textbook also was condemned by Fulton Lewis, jr. in a broadcast Sunday night.

Lee listed more than two dozen passages that he found objectionable.

Among them was one dealing with Russia. It stated that during the war the Russians "with inferior equipment . . . stopped a powerful army, facing death willingly. They fought for their homes and their ideology."

Other cited passages were:

"The United States has increasingly curbed the selfish and provided for the welfare of the many."

"Socialism means the use of government to bring about equality of opportunity among citizens.

"Socialists are not revolutionary but evolutionary, and stand for democracy with civil liberties."

"A poor man accused of a crime cannot afford able lawyers to plead his cause most advantageously; but he does usually have a sympathetic jury. When a fine is imposed, the rich man pays the fine—perhaps with no inconvenience; the poor man serves his time in jail."

Planning Unit Powers to Be Parley Topic

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) yesterday called a House District Committee meeting for Monday to act on the bill to enlarge the powers of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

McMillan said the planning bill would be the first business.

He announced the meeting after receiving a 16-page typewritten analysis of the Senate-approved bill from the planning group. Commission Secretary T. S. Settle urged "prompt enactment." The bill has passed the Senate.

The commission said existing law no longer gives it enough power to do the comprehensive city and regional planning job needed for the Washington metropolitan region. It said that movement of Federal agencies outside the District into nearby areas has created new necessity for central Federal planning as well as "regional harmony" in planning.

The report added:

"The necessity for having a Federal agency do the central planning and coordinating (of local plans) is justified on three principal grounds:

"1. The activities of the Federal Government are the basic industry of the region and hence their disposition is a potent factor in laying out all major elements of the regional plan.

"2. The District of Columbia, as the urban center of the region, is under Federal jurisdiction.

"3. The dominance of the national defense problem requires the leadership of the Federal Government in the making of a sound plan."

The commission said that the need for Maryland and Virginia to take part in the planning is shown by the fact that about one-fourth of the Federal employes in the area now work outside the District.

Miss Davidge, Mason's Assistant, Resigns

Miss Anne W. Davidge, special assistant to Guy Mason for the nine years he has been District Commissioner and his secretary for nearly 20 years before that, resigned yesterday. She gave no reason.

G. A. Turner, assistant secretary to the Board of Commissioners, was assigned temporarily to assist Mason.

Theft Suspect Freed After 2 Mistrials

Irvin A. Paetow, 24, was acquitted yesterday in District Court of a charge of housebreaking and stealing a purse containing $15.

The jury returned the verdict to Judge David A. Pine after more than 2 hours' deliberation. Paetow was represented by Attorney Saul G. Lichtenberg.

It was the third time that trial of the case was begun, but the first time that it reached a conclusion.

On the other two occasions, Assistant United States Attorney Robert M. Scott inadvertently mentioned "purses," although only one purse was involved in this case. Because of possible prejudice, mistrials were granted.

Paetow awaits trial in two other housebreaking cases.

Per Week

$19.50 Food Budget for Four Shown

A family of four here can eat on $19.50 a week, the District Health Department's Bureau of Child and Maternal Welfare reported yesterday in its annual "Family Food Budget Guide."

The $19.50 won't provide an exciting diet to families used to steak and chops, officials said. But it represents the minimum cost of an adequate diet to low-income families for whose guidance the pamphlet was prepared.

A sample weekly menu provides for one meatless day with tongue, hamburger and liver (pork or lamb) doing for the rest of the week. Eggs are allowed twice for breakfast. The rest of the menu consists largely of vegetables, canned fruits, cereal, bread, margarine, milk and coffee.

Some suggestions given by the bureau to stretch food dollars:

Plan menus for the week and buy as much as possible on weekends to take advantage of sales; take advantage of seasonal foods; home-cooked foods cost less than those already prepared; correct cooking methods and wise use of left-overs save money.

Free pamphlets may be obtained from the Health Department's Bureau of Public Health Education at the Municipal Center, 300 Indiana ave. nw.

Gaming Raid Nets Four

Police made two double plays in a numbers raid yesterday.

An undercover agent walked into the Mills Variety Store, 11 H st. nw., at about 1:15 p. m., and placed a bet on a number. When he came out, he signaled First Precinct Detectives Arthur Weber and Nick Genua and U. S. marshals, who went into the store armed with search warrants.

Police arrested Sidney Berman, 41, of 1360 Peabody st. nw., an employe, and Ann Carlo, 28, of 2625 30th st. se., listed as proprietor. While they were in the store, in walked Samuel R. Lafksy, 32, of 8112 Tahona dr., Silver Spring, who had what police called a "quantity" of football lottery slips, and George T. Johnson, 50, of 14 DeFries st. nw., who, police said, carried a package of lottery slips.

The police recovered lottery slips from Miss Carlo and marked money from the cash drawer.

All four prisoners were arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on operating a lottery and posession of lottery slips. Bond for Miss Carlo and Berman was set at $1500 each and for Johnson and Lafsky, $500 each. The case was continued to December 20.

Murder Suspect Surrenders

Vernell Simon, 32, of 1526 Columbia st. nw., yesterday was charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Henry Pendelton, 19, of 1459 Florida ave. nw. in a delicatessen at 2219 14th st. nw. at about midnight Monday.

Simon surrendered to Police Pvt. Paul F. Thorne at the corner of 9th and R sts. nw.

Thorne recognized Simon from the description furnished at 8 a. m. rollcall yesterday. He met Simon's brother, Ollie, a cab driver, during the morning and convinced Ollie it would be better if Simon gave himself up. Their subsequent meeting was then arranged.

Police said Simon told them he and a friend went to see Pendelton after his friend and Pendleton had argued. He said that when he and his friend tried to leave the delicatessen, Pendleton "looked like he was reaching" for a weapon.

Simon told police he then pulled his gun and fired. Pendleton was pronounced dead on the scene by a Health Department ambulance doctor.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 11:30 a. m today

Former Rep. Louis Ludlow Dead at 77

Louis Leon Ludlow, 77, a former newspaperman and a member of Congress for 10 consecutive terms, until his retirement in 1949, died yesterday at George Washington University Hospital after a heart attack.

Mr. Ludlow

The first newspaperman to go directly from the press gallery to a Congressional seat, Mr. Ludlow was a Democrat from Indianapolis, Ind.

Born on a farm in Fayette County, Ind., he began his newspaper career on the Indianapolis Sun when he was 18. In 1896, Mr. Ludlow married Katherine Huber, society editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel, where he was employed as a reporter.

Mr. Ludlow was Washington correspondent for Indianapolis newspapers for many years, served in the 71st through 80th Congresses, and authored six books, including the autobiographical "Cornfield to Press Gallery" and a political satire, "Senator Solomon Spiffledink."

Besides his wife he leaves three daughters, Mrs. Blanche H. Hudson, Mrs. Margery Kaiser and Mrs. Virginia Hudson, all of Washington, and a son, Louis Ludlow, jr., of Sunnyvale, Calif.

Funeral services will be held at Gawlers Funeral Home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., Thursday, at 10 a.m. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The National Press Club, of which Mr. Ludlow was a member, will be represented by a committee of 25, including President Radford Mobley and all past presidents.

Blind Peace Justice Dies

THURMONT, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—Thurmont's blind justice of the peace—William Jackson Stoner—died at his home today at 70.

John Breen, Proofreader For Post, Dies

John N. Breen, 73, printer and proofreader for The Washington Post for the past 30 years, died yesterday at his home, 167 U st. ne., after a seven-month illness.

Mr. Breen

A one-time union organizer, Mr. Breen left New Orleans in 1915. He went to work for The Post soon after arriving in Washington and then for 20 years, he practiced law during the day and came to work as a printer at 5 p. m. every day.

About 10 years ago, Mr. Breen decided his health didn't permit continuing the two careers, so he gave up the law.

Mr. and Mrs. Breen marked their fiftieth wedding anniversary earlier this month.

Surviving are his wife; three daughters, Mrs. William R. Baxter, sr., of Greenbelt, Md.; Mrs. Ruth C. Wilkinson, 2901 Nash pl. se. and Mrs. Mortimer C. Mirantz, Natick, Mass.

Mrs. Luella Eddy Dies

NATICK, Mass., Nov. 28 (UP).—Mrs. Luella Eddy, 66, secretary of the Eddy Family Association, Inc., suffered a heart seizure in her home today and died in an ambulance enroute to a hospital.

A native of Canandaigua, N. Y., she was a member of the Eddy family by birth. Members of the Eddy family include Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Christian Science Church, and Singer Nelson Eddy.

V. P. Andreev Dies;

MOSCOW, Nov. 28 (AP).—The death of V. P. Andreev, deputy minister for the agricultural machinery industry in the Soviet government, was reported today.

Dr. Gardner Dies; Atomic Work Blamed

VALLEJO, Calif., Nov. 28 (AP).—Lung poisoning contracted during work on the war time atomic bomb project is blamed for the death of Dr. Eugene Gardner, one of the University of California's foremost nuclear physicists.

Dr. Gardner, 37, was co-discoverer of the meson—a fundamental atomic particle. He died Sunday.

Seriously ill since 1945, he had attributed his fatal ailment to the inhalation of beryllium dust at the U. C. Radiation laboratory from 1941 to 1943.

Dr. Gardner won international fame in 1948 when he and Dr. C. M. G. Lattes of Brazil discovered the first evidence of the production of mesons in the huge U. C. cyclotron. He was hospitalized immediately after the discovery, but carried on his researches from his bed.

Dr. Gardner worked in the Los Alamos and Oak Ridge atom bomb labs after his work with beryllium in Berkeley.

John Clark's Body Found in New Hampshire

CLAREMONT, N. H., Nov. 28 (U.P.).—The body of John McLane Clark, 41, publisher and editor of the Claremont Daily Eagle, was recovered today from Sugar River, where he drowned when he tumbled from a canoe while showing his three children how to paddle.

Police and firemen discovered the body of the onetime Government official snagged to a branch about a half-mile from where the canoe overturned Sunday.

Mr. Clark, former member of The Washington Post editorial staff, had gone with his children to canoe on a flooded field behind his home. Their light craft was swept into the river that had overflowed its banks during the weekend storm. The children were rescued.

Arvid Kundzin Dies; D. C. Architect

Funeral services for Arvid L. Kundzin, 59, District government architect who was in charge of a group which designed the new Municipal Center, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Money and King funeral home, Vienna, Va. Burial will be private.

Mr. Kundzin died yesterday at his home near Great Falls in Fairfax County, Va., after a week's illness.

Born in Estonia, Mr. Kundzin was educated in his native land and at the University of Riga in Latvia. He came to Washington in the early 1920s as secretary of the Latvian Legation.

After a few years as a partner in a private architectural firm here, Mr. Kundzin joined the District government in 1927. He returned to private business in 1932 but in the following year rejoined the government and was placed in charge of a division of architects assigned to design the Municipal Center.

Mr. Kundzin also worked on the design of the new Central public Library and the Municipal and Juvenile Courts. During World War II he was a consultant in the planning and designing of air raid shelters for the District.

A bachelor, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Tekla Kundzin, two sisters, Miss Tekla Kundzin and Miss Maria Kundzin of the home address; and a brother, Walter Kundzin, Purcellville, Va. Mr. Kundzin brought his mother, sisters and brother from Europe within the past two years.

Arch McFarland Dies; Wheeling Steel President

WHEELING, W.Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Arch L. McFarland, 67, president of the Wheeling Steel Corp. for the past 10 years, died in a hospital today. He suffered a heart attack 10 days ago. Mr. McFarland had been in the steel business since 1905

By Dorothea Cruger

TIME'S A-WASTIN', Christmas shoppers! Thanksgiving is behind us, the first snows have fallen and Friday is December 1. If you've been forgetting your vow to make this an early-shopping year, there's still time to do some leisurely browsing about the gift counters, but the word is fast spreading that there are only some two dozen shopping days left. Here are three ideas to give you a head start on your buying errands—something for any young man, for any young or not-so-young gal, and for any hostess who plans to dispense some Christmas cheer!

HANDSOME additions to a Christmas table, and useful all through the year are these silver plated serving ladles. The hollow handle punch ladle and the soup ladle come in any one of four patterns, boxed especially for Christmas giving. By Holmes & Edwards, the punch ladle is $14.75, the soup ladle $7.50. At Ernest Burk, Kann-Oppenheimer.

THESE CHRISTMAS BELLS will never ring, but they will give out four delicious fragrances! The junior-sized bell ($3.25) has lipstick and purse vial of perfume. The medium-sized bell ($3.95) contains both toilet water and perfume, and the large bell offers compact, lipstick and perfume vial, for $5. By Coty, the sets come in L'Aimant, L'Origan, Emeraude and Paris fragrances, and are available at most perfume counters.

WHAT's his school? G. W., Maryland, U. Va.? You'll find it lettered in traditional school colors on this plastic tie-rack that will hold up to 32 ties. Weighing only four ounces, the rack will fold against wall or closet door. $1.50 at notion department of Woodward & Lothrop, Lansburgh's.

Soroptimist Club to Meet

THE SOROPTIMIST CLUB OF WASHINGTON will hear Robert H. North, executive assistant of the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers, discuss the field of public relations at a regular luncheon meeting today at 1 p. m. at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Mary Hysong will preside. . . . The Tower Business and Professional Women's Club will hold a dinner and benefit entertainment today at 6:30 p. m. in the Fairfax Hotel. Proceeds will go to the Christmas Charity Fund which will aid needy families in the Brookland-Woodridge area.

B'NAI B'RITH WOMEN, ARGO, will see a skit, with a cast of 50 women depicting the community services which B'nai B'rith renders, when the organization meets November 29 at the Jewish Community Center.

Jean Garthwaite Is November Bride

National City Christian Church was the scene of the marriage November 23 of Miss Jean Gordon Garthwaite, daughter of Mrs. Edwin Lowell Garthwaite of Madera, Calif., and John Henry Maddox 3rd. A wedding breakfast for the family at the Shoreham Hotel followed.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Maddox, jr., of Oakland, Calif. He is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Maddox and Mr. and Mrs. Alex Maddox of Washington. He is a graduate of the Univeristy of California, class of 1950, where he was a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity. The bride is a graduate of the same class and her sorority was Kappa Alpha Theta.

Prize Fruit Cake recipe given by Mrs. B. D. Oakes, Jr.

HERE'S HER SPECIAL RECIPE:

1 cup salad oil
1½ cups Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar
4 eggs, separated
2 teaspoons allspice
2 tsps. cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup grape juice
1 cup chopped citron
1 cup raisins, seedless
1 cup chopped candied pineapple
1 cup chopped figs
1½ cups chopped candied cherries
3 cups broken walnut meats

Combine salad oil, sugar and egg yolks; beat 2 minutes. Sift together spices, salt, baking powder and 2 cups flour; add alternately with grape juice to first mixture. Combine fruits, nut meats and remaining flour; add. Beat egg whites stiff; fold in. Pour into greased angel food pan.

Bake in slow oven, 275°F., 4 hours. Cool 1 hour. Remove from pan; cool on wire rack. Store until needed. Mrs. Oakes, who lives in Greensboro, N. C., says to be sure the sugar is Franklin, for that way you will get

Squabble Breaks Out in Office When One Secretary Informs Another, a Newcomer, That Staff Gives Boss Christmas Gifts; Dissenter Calls This Bootlicking

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman 47, employed since October 1 in the private office of a firm of two professional men, where I do stenographic and secretarial work. There is another woman secretary here, I'll call her Miss Bee, who is perhaps 38 years old; also a young man, professionally trained, working here to learn the ropes.

My salary is merely average, on which I maintain a home for myself and an elderly relative. My employers are well fixed financially and one has just bought a quite expensive home. All of which has a bearing on a question that has just come up. Yesterday Miss Bee asked what I planned to give her boss for Christmas; she said she intends to give him a leather desk pad. In astonishment I replied that I wasn't giving him anything; that in my many years of employment I'd never before worked in an office where the secretaries gave presents to their employers.

Miss Bee assured me that she's never worked in an office where she didn't give her boss a Christmas present; and she added that our boss probably would give each of us a present costing maybe $15. I think it is perfectly ridiculous for persons in our position, on our salaries, to spend five or ten dollars on gifts for men who are worth so much more than we—and with whom there isn't and never will be a friendly exchange outside the office. I think it smacks of bootlicking efforts to ingratiate oneself with the boss.

I feel I am here to do a job for pay and if I do it well and receive the salary, that's all that is necessary. If my employer should give me a Christmas present, I would consider it a bonus for service, not a gesture to be reciprocated, as the expenditure would mean nothing to him. However, I want a pleasant working relationship here; and if the others give presents to the boss, I suppose I'll be conspicuous if I don't follow suit. Am I a sourpuss with the wrong opinions? Am I just too old for the secretarial role? Do you favor Miss Bee's slant or mine?

It appears that Miss Bee practically knocks herself out trying to make a hit on the boss—skipping lunch hour half the time if she has dictation to transcribe and getting to work in the morning long before office hours. However, she isn't experienced in the work we are doing, which could be the reason for her extra application.

B. N.

DEAR B. N.: The faculty of flexible accommodation to new types of behavior in a new environment is essential to survival for any length of time, either in the animal or human situation. Furthermore, in the human species, ready adaptability to new conditions is a touchstone of mental health and intelligence, also a traditional hallmark of civilized breadth of character. And I regret to say you are making a negative showing on all three counts when you raise such a howl about Miss Bee's idea of playing office Santa Claus to the boss.

Of course Miss Bee seems equally off base on the score of mellow maturity of character. From what you say of her workaday attitudes towards office routine, she is one of those rare creatures, fast disappearing from the employment scene, whose job is her life, as the saying goes. It appears she has no other substantial interests nor any significant human relationships outside the office to absorb some regular portion of her time and attention.

As a rule such devotion to duty as this has unfortunate implications. It signifies a person who is unconsciously a slave to the neurotic conviction that he (or she) has no reason for being, aside from drudging conspicuously in the service of somebody more powerful or important by worldly standards. This isn't commendable behavior from the mental hygienist's view, because it is a phobic suit for tolerance (or paternalist care), rather than a robustly productive performance. It issues from a hidden shortage of self esteem, and usually equates a barren personal life, devoid of meaningful close ties.

Now, taking up the question of whether to give the boss a Christmas present, I think the sensible, friendly, mannerly policy is to follow customary practice in that particular office. If the stenographic staff (excepting you) has been there other years and in the past has exchanged Yuletide gifts with these employers, you can't dissent without seeming rude, peculiar and stingy; and, as a newcomer to the situation, you ought to bill yourself better than that.

A suitable gift need not cost $5 or $10, even if Miss Bee does plan to splurge. Any useful trifle will please a recipient who has good taste and much more money than you have. And to give you the pitch of possibilities, I suggest a book-marker or initialed book matches or a packet of letter size blotters or a vest-pocket-size address book filled in for the boss with clientele data—if a dollar or two is all you can spare.

M. H.

Even a Pretty Girl Can be Prettier

By Ann Lawrence

Sixth Day of Ruth's Beauty Program

RUTH IS BY NO MEANS an "ugly duckling." She is naturally a pretty young woman. But she proves once again that even a normally-attractive woman can be made more attractive, prettier, with properly applied make-up and hair-styling to suit her own particular features.

Ruth had a too-kinky permanent about three months ago.

With her almost baby-fine hair, she should have a machine wave, or a machineless, perhaps, but not a cold wave.

THE SIDES AND BACK were trimmed only to even them because her hair already was the fashionable length for fall—anywhere from three to four inches long, measuring from the eartip.

However, Ruth had been using a rinse on her hair that had left it with a brassy, too-yellow color. Naturally blonde, she did need to lighten her locks to a younger, less faded tone.

Step one was the trimming and shaping.

Step two was a shampoo, a "silk sheen" shampoo which would wash out the old tint and leave her hair in a manageable, but not too soft and flyaway condition.

AFTER THE SHAMPOO, an ash blond rinse was applied. The shade is called "palomine" which comes pretty close to describing its true tone. It is a soft, blond color, utterly natural looking, which seemed to make Ruth's skin even fairer and more translucent-looking.

Ruth learned that she can dab the rinse on her hair with a small wad of cotton, working from scalp to the ends of her hair, or better still, she can comb the rinse through.

Ruth learns how to comb the rinse through the hair.

Sugar, Spice, Everything Nice Including Pumpkin, Go into this Luscious Pie

SUGAR AND SPICE and everything nice—including molasses! That's what P. M. H. wants to include in the making of her pumpkin pie.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you have a recipe for old-fashioned pumpkin pie made with molasses and lots of spice? P. M. H., Arlington, Va.

The one that follows has a little molasses, plus brown sugar and plenty of spice. Though not an old-fashioned recipe, I hope it will give you the flavor you want.

PUMPKIN PIE FILLING

- ¾ cup brown sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon ginger
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup water
- 1½ cups pumpkin, canned or home-cooked, drained
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 2 beaten eggs
- 1 tablespoon molasses

Combine brown sugar, salt and spices. Add remaining ingredients. Mix until smooth. Pour into unbaked pastry shell and bake in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) 30 to 40 minutes or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean.

DEAR ANNE:

M. W. will find an easy way to make enchiladas if she will go to any large grocery store and ask for canned tortillas and a can of enchilada sauce. There are two brands sold in Washington.

To make them takes a little system, but it is very easy. On the stove place a skillet with melted shortening, about ½ to 1 inch deep. On the burner behind that, put a saucepan with the enchilada sauce diluted according to directions. On the work space beside the stove have a plate, a bowl of chopped onion, a greased oblong baking dish, and the stack of tortillas, loosened from their papers.

With a pair of kitchen tongs, pick up a tortilla; dip it in the hot fat until it begins to puff up, which softens it. From the pan, with the tongs, dip tortilla in pan of sauce until well covered and place on the empty plate you have ready. Put a spoonful of onion on the tortillas, roll up and place in baking dish. After filling the baking dish (a heat-proof glass one is good) pour the balance of the sauce over the top and grated cheese to cover. Put in the oven to melt the cheese. These can be prepared in advance and heated just before serving.

We serve Spanish rice with our Mexican dinner. Together with the tamales and chili con carne fresh from the can and a mixed salad or guacamole, this makes a very satisfactory Mexican dinner, with chilled cubed pineapple for dessert. For bread, I use the long thin hard-crusted loaves spread with butter and garlic salt. Mrs. A. E., Arlington, Va.

Defense Secretary Addresses Women's Press Club

Chinese Attack 'Long Prepared', Marshall Says; Situation 'Critical'

By Lucia Brown

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE George Marshall yesterday called the present "great aggressive action" of the Chinese Communists "long prepared and long intended."

The situation in Korea is "very critical," he said, with "world-wide implications." The United Nations must "face up to it in a resolute manner," he told members of the Women's National Press Club at a luncheon at Hotel Statler.

At the best, he declared, we are "confronted with serious tension over a considerable period of time." He said he knew of no time in history when it has been more important to be calm, careful, and wise in one's conclusions.

UP UNTIL yesterday, he continued, we seemed to require only partial mobilization. Even now, "if our prayers are met," he said, our best hope still is to establish a solid basis of armed strength—a "posture" of defense from which we could move quickly to complete mobilization. An "enduring" system is needed, he declared. Compared with developing it, full mobilization would be "tragically simple."

"It is the desire of our Government to proceed in such a way as to avoid a full world war," he continued. "We must have an immediate build-up in armed strength. However, we can't just create a great force without making plans for carrying on when excitement has died and tension grown tiresome."

THE MOUNTAIN tops and valleys which have marked our preparedness program in the past won't do now, believes the general. It must be a long-term program and the American people must maintain strong morale to meet continuing demands on their strength.

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, first feminine Assistant Secretary of Defense, was also a speaker at the meeting. Sworn in by General Marshall on November 15, she said that he is the only man she ever worked with who doesn't care whether he appoints a man or woman to a job. When he first talked to her about the appointment, she continued, she protested that a woman in the role would be unorthodox. He looked surprised and impatient, and said he wanted someone with integrity and ability; whether it was a man or a woman made no difference.

DOZENS OF prominent guests attended yesterday's luncheon, including Under Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Dan A. Kimball; Col. Mary Hallaren, commanding officer of the Women's Army Corps; Senator Robert Kerr of Oklahoma; Mrs. Omar Bradley, wife of Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; the Ambassador of the Netherlands and Mme. Van Roijen; Senora de Callejon, wife of the Spanish Minister Plenipotentiary; Ambassador of Ceylon and Mme. Corea; Mme. Rahim, wife of the Egyptian Ambassador; the Minister of Austria and Mme Kleinwaechter; Senator Margaret Chase Smith; former Ambasador and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies; Mrs. Homer Ferguson and Mrs. Bourke Hickenlooper, wives of Senators; Mrs. Joseph Farrington, wife of the Hawaiian delegate; and Mrs. James Helm, White House social secretary.

SIR KEITH OFFICER, Australian Ambassador to Paris, will be a guest this weekend at the Australian Embassy. He is coming down from New York, where he is a U. N. delegate, with Gen. Kenneth Smart, Australian Consul General in New York.

MRS. ROBERT JOSEPH GRIGSBY is the former Miss Harriette Jane Kurtz, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Guy O. Kurtz. Her marriage, a candlelight service at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in College Park, Md., took place November 21. Given in marriage by her father, she wore nylon tulle over satin and carried an arm bouquet of gardenias. Her attendants included Miss Kathryn Kranz, Miss Rebecca Hartshorn and Miss Beverlee Smith. The bridegroom, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Grigsby of Landover, Md., was attended by John Murray, Maj. Robert Kurtz, Richard Stoder and Gail Patton. Both bride and bridegroom attended the University of Maryland, and their reception was held on the campus, at the Delta Delta Delta sorority house. They will live in Landover after a wedding trip to Mexico.

Trumans Honor Guests at Andersons' Dinner for 50

By Marie McNair

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Truman arrived in a flurry of snowflakes for the dinner last evening in their honor, given by Senator and Mrs. Clinton Anderson at the 1925 F Street Club.

The Chief Executive and First Lady were a few minutes late for "dinner at eight." Only Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford, who had driven in from their home on the Rockville pike, were later.

Mrs. Truman's gown was of deep purple tulle with voluminous skirt, and her white gloved hands held a white beaded purse. Mrs. Anderson wore black with large maroon dots.

Mrs. J. William Fulbright, wife of the Senator, called a cheery greeting to Cole, who was there to open the car doors, as she mounted the steps with her husband. Her gown of black velvet, made with a slight train, had a bodice of white velvet brocaded in black.

Most magnificent wrap was worn by Mrs. Joseph Davies. Fitted and flared and made of black velvet, it was banded at the bottom in white fox and boasted a waist-length cape of the same fur. Mr. Davies was there and also his son-in-law and daughter, Senator Millard Tydings, and Mrs. Tydings in hyacinth blue satin.

Then there were Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn; Special Assistant to President Truman, Averell Harriman, and Mrs. Harriman; Senator and Mrs. Robert Kerr, of Oklahoma; Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed; Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, and Mrs. Snyder wearing a gown of toast chiffon and lace.

Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark joined the company, Mrs. Clark in black tulle. Mrs. Perle Mesta, our Minister to Luxembourg, who will sail today from New York to return to her post, arrived in full-skirted tulle, in shades of ombre and beige.

With the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, was Mme. Bonnet, at 6 o'clock last night she was taking a last look around at the filled tables set up throughout the embassy rooms for the Christmas bazaar today for the benefit of the camps and hospitals services of the American Red Cross in Korea.

Under Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr. were guests. Secretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman was accompanied by Mrs. Chapman who wore white satin covered with a red velvet cloak.

Then there were Senator and Mrs. Herbert Lehman, Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and Mrs. Symington; Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, Secretary of the/Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Polly Guggenheim in aqua faille taffeta with a front panel of gold; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen, Morris Cafritz and Mrs. Cafritz, who wore a sweeping gown of black velvet, and Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt.

EARLY GUESTS were welcomed by the Bretsch's Sealyham, Nufa at the head of the stairway. Among the first to arrive were Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, who had welcomed their daughter, Mrs. Richard Cooper, and her two children the day before and are delighted that she will be with them for Christmas, although Colonel Cooper will be away in England.

Among those dropping in for a drink were the Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin, and Mme. Erkin in trim black velvet suit; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina, the First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy and tiny Mme. Esenbel, the latter in black with an antique gold necklace as accent; the Press Attache of the Turkish Embassy, Nuzhet Baba, and Mme. Baba, another lady in black.

MRS. SIDNEY GRAVES and Mme. Poulieff talked on the sofa; Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Coors were there and others were Admiral James Foskett, with Mrs. Foskett in a green satin gown dotted in gold; Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy and Helen Murphy's sister, Mrs. Allen Wallace; Roy St. Lewis, and his Peggy looking exactly like a Dresden figurine with a pale pink velvet hat and matching paradise on her fair hair, and wearing a black velvet frock with tiny pearl bead trimming about the neckline.

Mr. and Mrs. Fay had loaned their home to the Washington chapter of the Netherlands-American Foundation for the party yesterday. Hosts were the foundation's chairman and the board of directors, which included Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck (he's former United States Ambassador to Holland), Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gilpin Ervin, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, the James L. Houghtelings and Major Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor.

Yesterday, too, cocktails were hoisted at the home of the Military Attache of the Australian Embassy, Brig. Gen. Lewis G. Dyke, and Mrs. Dyke, as a farewell to the Naval Attache of the Australian Embassy and Mrs. H. B. Farncomb. The Farncombs are leaving December 8 for Australia and a new assignment.

MRS. ALEXANDER KIRK was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Westchester, where she makes her home. Mme. Popovic, wife of the Yugoslav Ambassador, was ranking guest

Busy Days for Blair House

First Lady Hostess at Luncheon

By Elizabeth Maguire

LADIES OF THE CABINET were entertained yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Truman at Blair House. Pink carnations, pink and white snaps and Baker fern centered the table, and a section of the Marine Band orchestra furnished music.

Guests of the First Lady at this annual function were Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. George C. Marshall, Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, Mrs. Francis P. Matthews and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter. Also included were Mrs. James E. Webb, Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr., Mrs. Theron Lamar Caudle, Mrs. Myron M. Cowen, Mrs. John C. Wiley. United States Minister to Luxembourg Mrs. Perle Mesta, Mrs. Curtis Shears and Mrs. James M. Thomson were also guests.

FRIENDS OF Margaret Truman will be happy to see her back in Washington on more than one occasion during the coming weeks. After her much heralded concert at Constitution Hall on Tuesday, December 5, she will be honored at a buffet supper given by the American Newspaper Women's Club, and on Wednesday, December 13, she will be joint hostess with her mother at a Blair House luncheon honoring Miss Margery Clifford.

Miss Clifford, bride-elect of Lieut. William H. Lanigan, jr., USMC, is the daughter of Clark McAdams Clifford, former special counsel to the President, and Mrs. Clifford. Her wedding will take place December 20, at All Saints' Chevy Chase Church.

On Monday, December 4, the day before her concert, Miss Truman will hold a press conference in the East Wing of the White House. Mrs. James Meredith Helm, White House social secretary, did not say at her own news conference, held yesterday, whether or not Sidney Dietch, Miss Truman's new singing teacher, would be present on December 4. Nor did Mrs. Helm know why Miss Truman and her former teacher, Miss Helen Traubel, Metropolitan Opera star, had severed connections last summer.

MRS. TRUMAN will give another luncheon at Blair House on Tuesday, December 12, when she will entertain for the wives of the Justices of the Supreme Court. Today she will attend the bazaar to be given at the French Embassy for the benefit of the American Red Cross and the camp and hospital facilities of the United Nations forces serving in Korea.

MRS. HARRY TRUMAN
. . . luncheon hostess yesterday

Tomorrow Mrs. Truman will attend a luncheon to be given at the Congressional Country Club by the United States Savings & Loan League in connection with the league's fifty-eighth annual convention. The opening session of the White House Conference on Children and Youth at the National Guard Armory on Sunday, December 3, at 8 p. m., will also be attended by the First Lady.

National Ballet Performance December 12 to Benefit DAR

Two noted dancers, Mme. Gloria Fokine and Miss Kathryn Mullowny, will be guest artists at the National Ballet's benefit performance to be given at Constitution Hall on December 12.

Sponsored by the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, this will be the first public performance of the National Ballet, of which Miss Marion Venable is director, since its recent incorporation as the successor to the Washington Ballet Soiree. Net proceeds of the benefits will be transferred by the District Chapters to the building fund of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

It will be Mme. Fokine's first appearance in the United States. A native of Havana, she was trained at the Pro-Arte Musical in that city and danced in many well known ballets. In the forthcoming performance she will dance a classical variation in the ballet "Reverie" with music by Chopin and choreography by Marrion Venable. Mme. Fokine is the wife of Leon Fokine, who is now ballet master for the National Ballet.

Kathryn Mullowny, Washington's own ballerina who formerly starred with the Metropolitan Opera ballet, has appeared in the National Capital several times as the guest star with the Washington Ballet Soiree. On December 12, she will dance "Waltz Masquerade" with music by Aram Khachaturian and choreography by John Sergieff. Miss Mullowny commenced her serious ballet training here and continued it in Paris with the famous ballerinas Trefilova and Egorova. Later, she studied in London with Astafieva.

The American Ballet became the opera ballet at the Metropolitan Opera in 1935 and Miss Mullowny was its premiere danseuse.

Leon Fokine, newly appointed ballet master, is a recent arrival in Washington. Fokine began his training when 10 years old at the Imperial School of Gallet in St. Petersburg, Russia. He is one of only four famous Russian dancers now dancing in our country who had their ballet training in the past generation of that school.

Planning for the benefit performance with Miss Venable are the State regent of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. James D. Skinner, the State chairman of the building fund committee, Miss Luella P. Chase, and members of her committee.

One On the Aisle

Meaty Leftovers From a N. Y. Lunch

By Richard L. Coe

THE TOWN BETWEEN THE RIVERS: Lunchtime at the Warwick gives you the idea that 45th st. has moved up to 54th, bypassing those more crowded 44th st. bistros, Sardi's and the Algonquin.

At one table, John Gielgud is flanked by Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner. At another, Celeste Holm sits with Producer Richard Krakeur and Georgia Gillie. Between the two, the Cyril Ritchards host an old friend from Australia and another from Egypt. Down on 44th st. their names are all in lights above the Royale, the Morosco and the Music Box.

Ritchard and his wife, Madge Elliott, are the toasts of the afternoon, for the morning newspapers have just carried ads lauding the couple's scintillating humors in "The Relapse." The friend from Egypt enjoys the honor of introducing Miss Holm to the Ritchards.

Something would definitely seem to be cooking between the heads of the Theater Guild and Gielgud, but, alas, it's not likely to come off. Miss Helburn and Langner, knowing that Gielgud likes nothing better than work, have the bright idea of reviving "The Importance of Being Ernest" for matinees only, three a week, since Gielgud, Pamela Brown and Cyril Ritchard are all in town and, though she's back in London, perhaps Edith Evans would return to play Lady Bracknell.

It's a pipe dream, of course, as so many theatrical conversations are. With the passing of the Oscar Wilde copyrights this week, there is the added inducement of no royalties to pay, a matter which has countless British rep companies plotting Wilde revivals, to open next Monday.

All four stars are brimming and cheerful and they should be. As Washington saw, "Affairs of State" and "The Relapse" are immensely light-hearted and the Gielgud production of "The Lady's Not for Burning" is a healthy hit.

I reminded Lawrence Langner of his promise to bring "The Lady" to Washington, and received one of Gielgud's quick, frank observations. "I suppose," he remarked, "we could put off the Stratford season and begin the Festival of Britain after we've played the Gayety."

This reminds Cyril of another Gielgud luncheon remark. Just before the recent Stratford season closed, the Prime Minister and Mrs. Attlee were honor guests at the Shakespeare Theater and John sat next to Mrs. Attlee—during lunch. With his mind, as usual, darting about the people in the room, he suddenly recalled his social manners and decided to make table talk with the lady on his left. "Where," he asked, "do you live in London?" "Number 10 Downing st.," she replied. The Gielgud response was not recorded.

The Big Storm

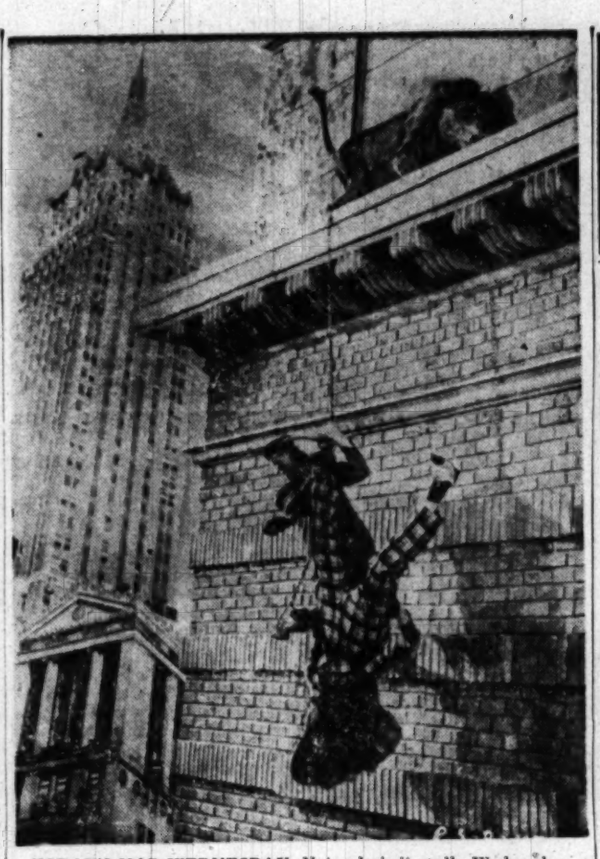
Gielgud is delighted to be back in New York, and though I think the Guild's idea for a Wilde revival isn't likely to come off, he may well direct something in his off hours. He's living at Beatrice Lillie's apartment and has leased his own charming London home to the Jack Coopers, who are both with Tyrone Power in "Mister Roberts."

The weekend's big storm brought in a pack of stories from the hinterland. The Lunts, who never lose money, did just that to the extent of $10,000 in refunds to Pittsburghers who couldn't get through the 30 inches of snow to the theater. They trekked on to Detroit without scenery, opening on schedule Monday night at the Cass in "I Know My Love." Miss Fontanne's arms still is in a cast, but the cast's gotten smaller, reports Miss Helburn.

Besides their acquaintance from Cairo Opera House days, the Ritchards' party includes a fabulously experienced lady they knew in their Australian youth. Peggy Purdell, a story editor of Twentieth Century-Fox. I asked her (1) how she got her job, (2) how she held it, (3) what went wrong with some stories. Lively Peg also is diplomatic, which probably is why she's been at story-editing for the same company 14 years. She did laugh, though, recalling that the studio had paid Mary Orr $3000 for the short story Mankiewicz turned into "All About Eve." That was a bargain, she concedes.

"Which reminds me," says Cyril. "Everyone knows that the Bette Davis part suggests Tallulah, but how about Eve? Few people seem to realize she represents one of our young actresses." I'm not going to be quoted as to who she is, but Ritchard described her neatly: "She wears the expression of an angel while she's treading on everyone else's face."

But the Big Storm wasn't the reason for one of the most amusing stories that blew in from the road. The scenery of the touring "Mister Roberts" left Reading, Pa., Saturday night en route for New Haven, wound up in Boston Monday morning. That's a pack of scenery to get lost, a whole cargo vessel, but by 8:20, United States Navy cargo ship AK 601 was safely anchored to the deck of New Haven's Shubert Theater.



TODAY'S MAD WEDNESDAY: Not only is it really Wednesday, but it's the day that brings Harold Lloyd's comedy back to Keith's screen in a comedy Preston Sturges calls "Mad Wednesday." In honor of their former chieftain, the Shriners are staging a parade in Lloyd's honor tonight at 8:30

Radio Gets Phone Calls

CENTERVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 28 (AP).—Mrs. D. A. Waynick's radio is receiving both local and long-distance telephone calls. Telephone and radio engineers were unable to shed light on the phenomenon today. The telephone exchange is about a mile from Mrs. Waynick's home.

New Etna Rupture Sends Out Lava Flow

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 28 (AP).—Two blackened, smouldering rivers of lava streamed down from Mount Etna tonight but observatory experts said three towns in their path were not in immediate danger.

A new rupture in the side of Europe's highest volcano, now pocked with twoscore lava-emitting breaks, directed a 100-foot-wide, 7-foot thick stream of lava at Milo, a town of 1500 population. The lava burned down its first house and was threatening the inland road between Milo and Zafferana.

Weakley Goes On Trial in Boss' Slaying

Luther R. Weakley, 49, of 1217 G st. se., went on trial yesterday in District Court on a first-degree murder charge in the fatal shooting of his former work supervisor on May 20.

The case began before an eight-man four-woman jury in the court of Judge Edward M. Curran. The victim Thomas G. Carnes, 43, supervisor at Blue Plate Foods, Inc., 316 F st. ne., where Weakley was a salesman.

Assistant United States Attorney Edward L. Carey told the jury the Government would prove Weakley bore Carnes "ill will" and that the killing was "deliberate and purposeful." Carey said that after Carnes had fired Weakley, the defendant came to the place where he had worked with a gun, and shot to kill.

The first witness was Douglas R. Nations, now of Atlanta but at the time of the slaying a salesman for the food company.

He said that before the shooting, Weakley had announced, "I am going to get Carnes. He fouled me up."

Under cross-examination by court-appointed defense attorney James J. Laughlin, Nations acknowledged that his recollection of the event was hazy.

The Government contends Carnes had accused Weakley of having shortages in his sales accounts, and that the men had quarreled over this.

Laughlin has not indicated what the defense will be. Police quoted Weakley as saying that Carnes had reached in his pocket, as if for a gun, and that the killing was in self-defense.

A half an hour after the shooting at the company offices, Carnes walked into the Fifth Precinct station to give himself up.

Yank POWs Fed Rice, Fish, Bread, But Many Perish

American fighting men taken prisoner by Communist forces in Korea are fed rice, dried fish, soup and two slices of bread.

Many die in prison camps of pneumonia, dysentery or malnutrition. Others are murdered in cold blood by the Communists when they "get in the way" of a sudden troop movement.

This grim account of life in a Korean prisoner-of-war camp was given yesterday by Capt. William Davis Locke, High Point, N. C., an Air Force pilot who was shot down behind the enemy lines last August 17. He and two other American prisoners escaped from the Communists at Pyongyang shortly before United Nations troops captured the city.

American Reported Seized in Chungking

HONGKONG, Wednesday, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—The leftist newspaper Ta Kung Pao reported today that an American and a Frenchman had been arrested in Chungking, the American on serious charges.

The newspaper gave the American's name as Joyce. Two Joyces were known to have been in Chungking, a Mary Knoll missionary, the Rev. John Joyce, and a civilian named James Joyce. The newspaper account said the American was accused of black-marketing ECA supplies, spying for the United States, listening to foreign broadcasts and inspiring public disturbances.

$469,765 Is Low Bid For Groveton Sewers

A low bid of $469,765 has been submitted to Fairfax County authorities on a proposed 16-mile network of sewers in the Groveton area of the county.

It was submitted by the Luck Construction Co., of Richmond. All five bids will be submitted to the county's supervisors next Wednesday. The Groveton project is part of a three million dollar improvement program approved by voters of the county's Sanitary District No. 1 last year.

Legion Post Urges Use Of Atom Bomb in Korea

In a resolution adopted unanimously, the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Post, American Legion, last night urged use of any and all means—including the atomic bomb—to end the war in Korea speedily.

The resolution will be sent to national American Legion officials. The post, No. 105, met at the post home, 1206 Rockville pike.

Stop, Read, Think

We're of the opinion that most men down deep inside would like to become a salesman of some kind, but don't have nerve enough to apply for a salesman's job because they don't think they have enough experience. If you think you can live on $66 per week while learning to sell, we are willing to teach you. If this proposition interests you in any way, come in for an interview; we won't kid you. If you think you have the qualities that make a good salesman, we will accept you in our organization and teach you the highest paying profession in the world. Opportunity knocks for those who seek it, this may be yours. Remember, salesmen are made and not born. Remember when you went to school, you took 12 years to get through, but you made it. We have one of the finest sales training schools and if you're sincere and a hard worker, we will show you how to get through this one. Men who have never sold before are now enjoying earnings of $5,000 to $10,000 per year. This we offer to you. Investigate this, it's really worthwhile.

500 ACRES—100 acres already sold for development. This acreage is located 4 squares over the District line in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. This bridge is now operating with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. There is no reason why the property will not be as valuable here as the 3 bridges on the Virginia end where the bridges end in Virginia. Property there is worth from one to two million dollars an acre, and that is the future of these 500 acres. We have also a 5-acre cemetery to be made larger, and under the Maryland law you cannot get a permit for any more cemeteries; but if you have already got a cemetery you can go ahead and develop it. Cemeteries, when they are completed, are retailed at $100,000 an acre. Barnaby blvd. has just been widened and regraded by the State of Maryland, and a number of shopping centers are promising to open up. We would sell this Barnaby front at a special price, property not less than 50c a sq. ft., for a large portion of it. This should be the greatest shopping center around Washington. When I built the town of Chevy Chase, D. C., where the theater is located in Chevy Chase, that ground I sold for 32c a sq. ft. is now worth 2 million dollars an acre in the shopping center, and when I sold it for 32c, people said I was charging too much for it. I bought that ground from Mr. Charles C. Glover, the deceased president of the Riggs National Bank, and he bought it for $50 an acre before Conn. ave. was ever opened up. That will help you understand what this property in Southeast will be worth. Sears and Roebuck, one of the largest department stores in the world, has bought a large tract over here and are going to open a big department store there. Other department stores are moving out in Maryland and Virginia. Kann's, Woodward & Lothrop and the Hecht Co. are speculating to open branches out this way. You can reach me at my home, OL. 4408, FULTON R. GORDON, Owner. Brokers, attention.

Maryland Brother and Sister Win National 4-H Contests

DAVID BUCHMAN JAMES SMITH MISS SMITH (Associated Press Photos)

. . . winners in national 4-H Club contests at Chicago

A Maryland brother and sister were named winners of $300 college scholarships yesterday at the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

They are James C. Smith, 17, and Ruth Edna Smith, 19, who live on their family's 250-acre farm at Little Orleans, Allegany County. Another Maryland youth, David T. Buchman, 17, of Owings Mills, Baltimore County, also was named a national 4-H winner.

Mary Lee Wampler, of Augusta County, Va., won national recognition in the canning competition. Charles Poland, of Loudoun County, Va., was named second alternate winner in the poultry achievement contest.

Smith won honors in the tractor maintenance division. He said, "A smooth running tractor takes the druggery out of farm work; by keeping it in good shape I have more time to play ball or go fishing."

His sister, Ruth, cited for achievement in the canning division, has helped her family can 61,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables. She attends the State Teachers' College at Frostburg.

Buchman, who has to his credit such projects as building an electric pig brooder and a deep freeze box, won his scholarship in the farm and home electric division.

Joint Sewage Study Backed

Alexandria City Council last night indorsed an Arlington proposal for a joint study of sewage and water problems in the northern Virginia area.

At the request of the Arlington County Board, which initiated the plan, the council designated two Alexandrians to serve on an interim committee to study advisability of joint action in meeting regional sewer and water needs. Its nominees were Vice Mayor Albert A. Smoot and C. Luckett Watkins, the city director of public works.

Under the Arlington proposal, nearby Virginia communities will consider the feasibility of establishing a regional sewer and water authority. Participants besides Arlington and Alexandria would be the city of Falls Church and Fairfax County.

At last night's meeting the council also appropriated $10,200 for the purchase of city hall space formerly occupied by the Alexandria-Washington Masonic Lodge. The Masons erected the quarters above city hall in 1876 with the understanding they would be sold back to the city when the lodge was through with them.

Tenant Farmer Gets 5 Years for Firing Barn

Peter Leo Marshall, 41, of Mitchellville, Md., was sentenced to five years yesterday for firing the barn of Oden Bowie at Mitchellville last August 4. The barn and its contents of grain and farm machinery were destroyed with an estimated loss of $10,000.

Judge John B. Gray told Marshall, a former tenant of Bowie, he might have imposed the maximum sentence of 10 years, except that the smaller sentence was given seven other arsonists earlier this month by another Prince Georges County Circuit Court judge.

Hearings Start

Even a School Man Can Learn on TV

By Arthur Edson

THE FEDERAL Communications Commission (FCC) yesterday heard pleas for more television channels for education—and found that even a school man can learn from television.

William J. Wallin, chancellor of the board of regents for the University of the State of New York, told the commission.

"It's astonishing what you can learn from television.

"My father used to be pretty proud of the way he could carve a turkey, and I watched him closely. But the other night on the Arthur Godfrey show a chef came on and showed me a thing or two on how it should be done."

Miss Hennock

Educators, of course, have more interests than turkey-carving. They want channels set aside for stations owned and operated by educational institutions and organizations.

ONE DRAWBACK: Television costs so much to produce that most schools haven't been able to afford to put on programs. But Wallin thinks he may have the answer to that.

"Let the schools sell commercial programs," he said.

Commissioner Frieda Hennock asked:

"What would be the advantage of offering Milton Berle, Arthur Godfrey and Hopalong Cassidy on an educational station?"

Wallin said the commission should remember that no television audience, no matter how loyal, could spend all its time in the classroom. He said he figured a little lightening up, and a little cash, would be welcomed.

(At present, FCC rules bar sponsored programs on educational stations).

Wallin was asked by Commission Chairman Wayne Coy if the educational stations should handle controversial questions. Yes, said Wallin.

"What about a strike in the textile industry in New York?"

After a pause, Wallin said:

"It might be proper enough, but I'm not sure it would be wise."

HE LATER explained he had thought the studies should be on a long range basis, and that any spot studies might not amount to much.

"They tried it at Vassar, you know," he said. "Some of the girls went on the picket line. They didn't get anything out of it educationally."

Richard B. Hull, of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, told the commission:

If a city has only one television channel, the time should be split so that the educational institutions would be guaranteed time for their programs.

If a city has two or more channels, one should be set aside for educational institutions.

Hull also is manager of WOI-TV, Ames, Iowa, owned and operated by Iowa State College.

It's the only educationally-owned television station in the United States.

Upcoming tonight; radio—ABC, 8:30, new aviation adventure series, I Fly Anything, in which Singer Dick Haimes turns actor to play the lead.

Radio and television—CBS and CBS-TV: 10 scheduled 10-round heavyweight bout in Chicago between former champion Joe Louis and Cesar Prion; Russ Hodges talking for radio and Ted Husing for television.

GOP School Attack Termed 'Unfortunate'

Criticism of the Arlington school board school construction program—made Friday in a report by the Arlington Republican Committee—was termed "unfortunate" last night by two speakers at a school board meeting.

Mrs. Inez Dalton, GOP committeewoman from Arlington Forest Precinct, said she regretted "there are some Republicans who feel prone to criticize the school board."

Reed K. Pond, chairman of the Citizens' Committee for School Improvement, termed "extremely unfortunate" the GOP criticism that the board has been trying to build "model" school buildings for "show purposes" instead of "basically good, permanent schools at moderate costs."

In its Friday resolution, the GOP committee said it would petition for a special election to authorize borrowing $3,515,000 for new school construction. The school board's $7,450,000 bond issue was defeated at the polls November 7 by 380 votes.

School board members have promised to hold a public hearing on the GOP suggestion at an unspecified future date.

At last night's meeting, School Superintendent William A. Early announced that the total value of Arlington's school buildings is $8,036,900, with their contents valued at $783,080, according to a recent insurance company survey.

Putting Us Back on Our Feet Again

These new Federal credit restrictions seem to be turning the clock back to the days of my youth, when the town banker was the only man in our neighborhood who could afford an auto.

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one would rather remain anonymous:

Last Saturday when I tried to unlock my snow-covered car, I found the keyhole frozen over.

Being a non-smoker, I had no matches. So I did the only thing I could think of. I put my mouth close to the keyhole and exhaled as lustily as I could.

I had been at it for several minutes when a police car drove up and I fell under the stern gaze of its occupants. "The lock is frozen," I explained, "but I think I'm getting it thawed out."

I don't think I sounded very convincing, but the policeman said okay, and the cruiser drove off.

After much huffing and puffing, the ice finally began to melt. I put a little extra pressure on the key and—pop!

The key ring broke; keys squirted out of my hand in all directions, and buried themselves in the snow.

Fifteen minutes later, when the bluecoats drove by again, they found me on my hands and knees, still searching through the slush.

"Making a snowman?" asked one officer, solicitously.

I had to produce my registration certificate to convince him it was really my car. He held a flashlight for me while I found the rest of the keys, and we parted with the usual amenities.

But as he climbed back into the cruiser, I heard him explain to his partner: "Go ahead—just a screwball."

And I can't say that I blame him.

MISCELLANY

District Liners are so well-read they embarrass me. E. T. Carr of 1631 N. Buchanan st., Arlington, Va.; Gregory Zatkovitch, jr., of 3135 24th st. ne. and Albert Seymour Bill, jr., of the University of Vrginia Law School, Charlottesville, Va., point out that "hoist with his own petar(d)" dates all the way back to Shakespeare. You'll find it in Hamlet, Act 3, Scene 4 . . . That "strut sitting down" wisecrack also seems to have a gray beard. L. Martin of 1629 Columbia rd. nw. tells me that it was used by a columnist in the Topeka Daily Capital 40 years ago. And Forrest C. Pogue of 10 W. Howell ave., Alexandria, Va., adds that Will Rogers later borrowed it. But he thinks the origin has been traced back (or at least credited) to Abe Lincoln, who is supposed to have said that Stephen A. Douglas was the kind of fellow who could strut sitting down . . . Of course the age of a story isn't nearly as important as the way it's told. Billy Rose has been using some mighty ancient plots on his television series, but good acting and staging save the day . . . This year's bazaar at Kimball Elementary School, Minnesota ave. and Ely pl. se., (this Saturday, from 3 to 9) will feature a museum of Washingtonia, in honor of the Sesqui. Mrs. Roselyn Silverman of 4045 Ely pl. se. tells me that the Kimball PTA will also have a barbershop quartet, folk dances, cakes and cookies . . . More streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital—from P. G., "Brooklyn," and G. E. Doying . . . If more of us had the spirit shown by our children, the Community Chest would be far over the top by now. Sarah P. Levine of 7815 Takoma ave. tells me that three of her little Takoma Park, Md., neighbors heard she was a volunteer solicitor for the Chest, and decided to help her. Barbara Enmeier, Isabelle Mohl and Michele Klenert, respectively of 31, 35 and 509 Boston ave., went from door to door in their neighborhood selling trinkets for pennies—and raised $1.57 . . . Is your pledge in yet? Mine is, but it's the first time in my life I ever did anything like that promptly. Anne Burness, who handled the Red Feather drive in our office, wouldn't give me "an important phone message" until I filled out my pledge card. Then she told me: "Your wife says to bring home a loaf of sliced white bread."

WASHINGTON'S OWN AL

All this talk about reopening the Belasco Theater as a canteen for servicemen brings an excellent suggestion from Lew Frank of the Chicken Hut, 427 11th st. nw. Lew says:

"If and when they get it open, how about calling it 'The Al Jolson Canteen,' in memory of the guy who never forgot our fighting men?"

REASSURING NOTE

The President has asked Congress to grant Statehood to Hawaii and Alaska right away, for security reasons.

He rated District suffrage as somewhat less urgent, however, indicating that no invasion of Washington is feared at this time—except, perhaps, by the Republicans.

Ilse Trial Witness Tells Of Skins' Use

AUGSBURG, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP)—A former corpse washer at Buchenwald told today of seeing the skins of tattooed prisoners prepared for tanning.

Benedict Kautsky, an Austrian from Zurich, Switzerland, was lead off prosecution witness in the German court trial of Ilse Koch, widow of Buchenwald's former commander.

The red-haired widow, 43, is charged with instigating 45 murders and 135 attempted murders of camp inmates. In addition, the court charges she had tattooed skins of prisoners prepared for lamp shades and other ornaments.

Kautsky, an inmate of Buchenwald for four years, said one of his jobs was washing and preparing executed inmates for dissection.

Another inmate was charged with preparing tattooed skins of prisoners, he said, but "he botched many of them and I was ordered to help him do a better job."

Mrs. Koch served four years of a life sentence from a United States court for war crimes against Allied nationals. She now faces a possible maximum sentence of a life term from the Germans for brutalities suffered by German and Austrian inmates.

Mrs. Koch has denied ever entering the prison ground proper, and declared she never heard of brutality at the camp, where 55,000 inmates died.

She was in a waspish ill humor as Chief Judge Georg Maginot questioned her.

She also denied witnesses' charges that she sometimes had a male inmate attend her while she lay nude under a sun lamp and that she had whipped an inmate because he failed to wash her lingerie properly.

She admitted having been intimate with the camp physician while married to Koch, but denied relations with a deputy camp commander.

Shortage of Rubber Threatened

By Drew Pearson

Communist advances in French Indo-China, Tibet and Asia generally are belatedly waking up some of our foreign-policy planners to what may be another Pearl Harbor.

PEARSON

In brief, the United States, after suffering the worst economic disaster in history when the Japs captured Singapore, may find our rubber, tin, quinine and other tropical products cut off again.

For four years the American people were forced to walk as a result of the rubber and tire shortage. Tin cans were also curtailed; while millions of dollars were spent planting cinchona or quinine trees in Latin America. Now, though we are much better prepared regarding synthetic rubber, part of this may happen all over again.

Chief lesson to be drawn from the Communist threat to our economic lifeline in Asia is the manner in which we have neglected our own best neighbors right next door in Latin America. While a few State Department officials under live-wire Assistant Secretary Edward Miller have been pushing Latin-American friendship, actually much of our financial help to European cartels has hurt Latin America.

The American public has largely forgotten the fact that when Columbus arrived in America he was amazed to find Indians bouncing balls. This was the first discovery of rubber, which then became the great industry of Brazil and other Latin-American countries.

Today, however, Manaos, the rubber capital of Latin America, has become a ghost city—after a Britisher smuggled seeds of the rubber plant to Ceylon.

Gradually the British-Dutch rubber cartel built up its markets in the United States and once they attained a monopoly position, they put the price squeeze on the American consumer. Despite the vigorous protests of Charles Evans Hughes when Secretary of State, we paid what the Asiatic rubber cartel wanted us to and paid through the nose.

After Pearl Harbor we began frantically to encourage our good neighbors in Latin America to grow rubber again. Brazil, Mexico, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Venezuela, Salvador, Nicaragua, Haiti, Honduras all were urged to grow rubber, regardless of cost. Loud were the cries: "This will never happen again."

However, it is happening again. In October, 1947, American delegates at the Geneva economic conference agreed to give up about two-thirds of the American rubber market to Asiatic rubber, chiefly British controlled. This meant two things:

1. The complete collapse of the new rubber industry we had encouraged in Latin America.

2. The closing of various synthetic rubber plants in the United States. Some of these plants, having been closed, later were sold at bargain-rate prices by Surplus Property Administrator Jesse Larson, who thought, perhaps correctly, that he was merely following national policy.

Meanwhile, though we are much better off when it comes to synthetic rubber, we would have to have rubber rationing all over again—if war came.

Helping G. I.'s

Senator "Long Tom" Connally of Texas, in addition to helping steer United States foreign policy, is never too busy to fight for the little fellow. He is now about to win an important financial victory for American doughboys in Korea.

On October 21, Senator Connally spotted an item in the Washington Merry-Go-Round which read:

"Under the current Army pay system, the real heroes in the Korean war are drawing the least pay. They don't even get a fair shake of the glory when the publicity and medals are dished out.

"These unsung heroes are the infantrymen, who form the Army's battering ram, but who are not paid as much as the technical men and pencil pushers behind the lines.

"It used to be that infantrymen could collect $10 extra each month for combat work. If they wore the combat infantryman's badge, it was good for a $10 monthly bonus. However, even this has been taken away from them in Korea."

Senator Connally clipped the column and sent it to the Army, together with a letter wanting to know why combat men were being discriminated against. He has now received a letter from the Army indicating that it would urge a $50 bonus monthly for combat enlisted men, with $100 a month for officers.

What the Army told Senator Connally in summary follows:

"The Department of the Army recognizes the plight of the infantrymen who in past wars and in the Korean operation have borne the brunt of the fighting. We intend to do everything possible to give the deserved recognition and compensation to those combat fighters upon whom the success of all our military efforts ultimately depends.

"From the standpoint of extra compensation for the combat fighter, the Army has prepared and submitted to the Department of Defense a proposal to ask Congress for extra pay for each month of combat duty in Korea. The Department of Defense has indicated considerable interest and we anticipate early submission of the proposal to Congress."
